Nazis Certain They Can Crush British Forces

Already Look Forward
Toward Establishing
New Order in Europe

Rome — (AP) — Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano remained in Rome today, without further indication as to when or if he will make a widely expected trip to Germany to confer with Nazi officials.

Authorities were silent, and advised against speculation.

One official denied that the Rome radio had broadcast a report that Ciano would be in Berlin Friday.

Berlin — (AP) — Complete confidence in Nazi ability to crush England was reflected today in the calmness with which the German people awaited a decisive test of strength which they believe may come at any minute.

The authoritative commentary Dienst aus Deutschland, which only yesterday reported everything was in readiness for a mass onslaught upon England, declared that the nation was awaiting Adolf Hitler's command to strike with a serenity which permitted it to look beyond the final struggle to the task of establishing a new order in Europe.

(Dispatches from Rome quoted German sources as saying Hitler might deliver an ultimatum to Britain within a few days in a speech before the reichstag.)

(British sources, however, dismissed reports of a Rome-Berlin "peace offensive" as merely a resort to "war of nerves" strategy and emphasized Prime Minister Churchill's declaration Sunday that Britain will fight on to the end.)

Reprove Yugoslavia

Yugoslavia, meanwhile, was reproved sharply by both the German press and political circles for permitting what they described as a pro-French demonstration in Belgrade with apparent official approval.

They referred to a memorial service in the French cemetery conducted by the French minister to Yugoslavia, whom the Boersens Zeitung called a supporter of General Charles de Gaulle, leader of the "French national committee" in London.

The presence at the ceremony of high Yugoslav officials drew caustic comment from Dienst aus Deutschland, which said: "The cause of peace in the Balkans and the interests of Yugoslavia in the reorganization of Europe are poorly served when high-placed representatives of the army and public life act in a manner more French than the French."

"Last Warning"

Hitler's newspaper, the Volkischer Beobachter, spoke with equal sharpness concerning a similar demonstration in Lyon, France, and referred particularly to the prayer of a French priest that France might arise to new glory.

The paper said the spirit which brought about the fall of France "again frivolously raises its head" and declared that "we are giving a last warning."

The German high command announced that bad weather had curtailed air activity against Britain, but reported that a merchant ship had been fired in an attack on a harbor in north Scotland and that a troop concentration had been bombed at Scapa Flow.

No air attacks on Germany were carried out by British planes during the night, the high command said.

Disarm Marines, Japanese Demand

Shanghai — (AP) — Three thousand Japanese residents approved a resolution tonight at a mass meeting urging Japanese military authorities here to "demand the disarming of the United States Marines unless the United States express their sincerity" by apologizing for treatment of Japanese gendarmes July 7.

Japanese Major General Saburo Miura complained the marines roughly handled 14 Japanese plainclothesmen they arrested.

Colonel Dewitt Peck, commanding the United States marines in the Shanghai defense area, denied the Japanese had been mistreated.

Hair-Raising Facts

A young California scientist has discovered a satisfactory method of classifying hair. So far he has found 21,870 distinct varieties. Criminologists have found his system useful in the apprehension of criminals. Although not so decisive evidence as fingerprints it often enables law officers to locate the party they want. Getting away from crime control and into the subject of locating other things that they want, let us suggest the Post-Crescent Want Ads. They have wide circulation at low cost and do the job regularly.

COCKER SPANIEL — Lost. Black with white on breast. Name, "Bonnie." Reward, $132 W. Prospect, Tel. 6659.

ROOTING FOR ROOSEVELT—Senator Alben W. Barkley is shown here holding aloft a huge portrait of President Roosevelt as the convention floor was filled with noisy demonstrators who demanded a third term nomination for the President.

Barkley had just told the convention of a conversation with Mr. Roosevelt in which the chief executive told of his third term views.

Nazis Say Hull Should Fight British Blockade

Berlin — (AP) — Authorized German sources declared today that if Secretary Hull means what he says about keeping world trade lanes open he must logically condemn the British blockade against Germany and Italy.

(Secretary of State Hull declared yesterday, in comment on the proposed closing of the Burma road by Great Britain, that the United States "has a legitimate interest in the keeping open of arteries of commerce in every part of the world.")

The British blockade, the Germans held, is in violation of the principle of freedom of the seas.

"We don't dare to say, however, that (Hull) will go so far (as to condemn the blockade)," these quarters said.

They noted, however, that American and British policies by no means always conform.

Washington — (AP) — German confessions that the United States should protest against the British blockade of Germany on the same grounds that it opposed the closing of the German route to China were rejected today by Secretary Hull.

Commenting at his press conference on the German reaction to his statement yesterday that this country opposed the closing of the Burma road and any other world trade arteries, Secretary Hull said there was no parallel between this situation and the British blockade.

He explained that nations at war have the right under international law to intercept commerce of belligerents or neutrals.

In the case of a privately-owned highway running through a nation not at war, Secretary Hull emphasized, an entirely different rule prevails.

Child Falls to Death As Screen Gives Way

Milwaukee — (AP) — Three-year-old Catherine O'Rourke died in a hospital last night a few hours after she fell from a third floor window in an apartment building. The child leaned against a screen and it fell out.

Willkie Expects and Hopes to Oppose Roosevelt in Election

Colorado Springs, Colo. — (AP) — Wendell L. Willkie said today he hoped the coming presidential campaign would be "conducted solely on the issues" but added that "if the opposition decides to reduce it to a smear campaign" he and his associates would "take care of ourselves."

"In all my public discussion, I have never made an unkind reference to any individual. I am hoping during this campaign to follow the same course."

The Republican nominee earlier had declared he would rather run against President Roosevelt than any other candidate.

Willkie said the chief executive was the best representative of the New Deal side of the coming campaign and that he would like to have a fight against him.

Willkie, sitting on a couch in his hotel apartment, listened by radio last night to Senator Alben W. Barkley's talk accepting the chairmanship of the Democratic convention.

He yawned several times, lay back occasionally on heavy green-striped pillows and thumbed through newspapers and a book.

When Barkley ended his talk with the statement that President Roosevelt "has never had and has not today any desire or purpose to continue in the office of president," Willkie dictated this comment to reporters:

"I'll make the same prediction I made the other night—that the president will be re-nominated on the first ballot and will accept the nomination."

Again when Barkley asserted that the Republicans had wanted "color" in their nominee and added that they picked a man who had been a Republican for only a short time, Willkie declared that the statement was "the most complimentary thing I have received since my nomination."

Barkley's address, Willkie said, was "all defensive but a reasonably good defensive talk."

FDR Not a Candidate But Democrats Will Draft Him

'Expansion' Aim Of New Premier Named in Tokio

Jap Foreign Office
Says Britain Will Halt War Materials

Berlin — (AP) — (By radio) — The German radio said tonight that Premier-Designate Prince Konoye of Japan had appointed Lieutenant General Tojo as minister of war and Admiral Oikawa as minister of the navy.

Lieutenant General Tojo is the chief of the army's air force, and Admiral Oikawa is chief of the naval base at Yokohama.

Tokyo — (AP) — Prince Fumimaro Konoye, blue-blooded proponent of a totalitarian-like one-party political system for Japan, was ordered by Emperor Hirohito tonight to head a new government.

Under Prince Konoye, Japan is expected to march farther along the road to domestic totalitarianism and foreign expansion. He was called to the imperial palace to receive the emperor's order.

Prince Konoye was chosen to succeed Admiral Mitsumasa Yonai, whose cabinet resigned yesterday, apparently under pressure for a more nationalist Japan.

The new premier was expected to form a cabinet quickly.

Konoye's first move after receiving the imperial command to form a cabinet was to confer with General Shunroku Hata, the war minister, and Vice Admiral Zengo Yoshida, the naval minister, and to request speedy appointment of their successors.

Thereafter, he told the press: "I wish to determine the national policy in cooperation with the ministers for war, navy and foreign affairs."

Despite the shift in government policy which may be expected, observers foresaw no immediate radical change in relations with the United States.

Foreign relations, generally, are expected to pivot around Japanese moves toward the South sea now the paramount field of expected action.

The foreign office announced tonight that Great Britain had agreed to close the Burma road lifeline of the central Chinese government and arms traffic into China from the British crown colony of Hongkong.

The agreement, climaxing several weeks of negotiating between Foreign Minister Hiroshi Arima and British Ambassador Sir Robert Leslie Craigie, is to take effect Thursday.

Chiang's Warning

Chungking — (AP) — Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek warned Great Britain today that any attempt to link closing of the Burma road and Chinese-Japanese peace talks would be tantamount to aiding Japan and would result in "sacrifice of China's long-standing friendship."

He declared, nevertheless, that Britain was greatly mistaken if she thought closing the last important artery of aid to China would shorten the Far Eastern war.

Rumanian Oil Cars In Reich Service

Bucharest, Rumania — (AP) — Three thousand Rumanian tank cars, containing enough gasoline to operate 1,000 military planes for 45 days, are expected to be on their way to Germany shortly as the result of a decision of the Rumanian oil commission.

Since shortly after the war started, Rumania has compelled Germany to use her own tank cars to transport oil products. However, now that Rumania's foreign policy is oriented to that of the reich, all 9,000 tank cars owned by oil companies operating in the country have been requisitioned and one-third have been routed for movement to Germany.

Coakley Offered Job As Heil's Secretary

Madison — (AP) — State Senator Maurice P. Coakley (R) Beloit, after under consideration today an offer to become personal secretary to Governor Heil.

The position, vacated Monday by William C. Maas who is seeking the Republican nomination for United States senator, was offered to Coakley by the governor during a 15-minute conference yesterday.

Although Coakley, senate majority leader during the 1939 legislative session, declined to comment, the governor said:

"He (Coakley) is considering the matter."

A graduate of Beloit college and the University of Wisconsin, Coakley is an attorney and has served in the state senate for two terms.

Annenberg Fails To Avoid Prison

Denied Probation or 6-Week
Addition to Stay of Execution

Chicago — (AP) — Federal Judge James M. Wilkerson today denied M. L. Annenberg's petition for probation. Annenberg is under sentence to serve three years in prison for violation of the income tax laws.

The court also denied a motion for a six-week extension of Annenberg's stay of execution, submitted Monday by the Philadelphia publisher's chief counsel, Weymouth Kirkland.

Judge Wilkerson sentenced Annenberg July 1 on his plea of guilty to evasion of $1,217,296 taxes on his 1936 income. At that time he granted a stay until July 22, next Monday.

A reporter found Annenberg at the Drake hotel. "I am going home to say goodbye to my family," the publisher told him dejectedly. "I am physically broken. I am going to do the best I can, if I live. When I go home I will have a chance to see my grandson for the first time." He was referring to the baby born recently to the wife of his son, Walter.

Annenberg declined to say when or where he would give himself up to the United States marshal.

Says Operations Needed

Kirkland's plea for extension of the stay, should probation be denied, was on the ground Annenberg needed to have two operations performed before going to prison.

The judge announced he simply had entered an order denying probation and an extended stay. A hearing on the probation plea was conducted Monday, at which time the court indicated it might order an examination of Annenberg by a government medical specialist.

Apparently the judge decided against the government medical examination. Annenberg's probation plea, made through his doctors and lawyers, was based largely on contentions he was suffering from heart, sinus and rectal trouble, arterio-sclerosis, anemia and insomnia.

Judge Wilkerson said today, however, that his denial order meant Annenberg would have to surrender next Monday to begin the prison sentence. The court added: "That ends it, as far as I am concerned."

Kirkland said Annenberg was in Chicago, but he did not know whether he would remain here until Monday, nor whether he might surrender in some other district.

Detroit Police Inspector Jailed

Detroit — (AP) — Federal Judge Edward J. Moynihan today ordered Inspector Wendell A. Lochbiller of the Detroit police committed to the federal detention farm at Milan, Mich., for refusing to answer questions before a federal grand jury investigating income tax evasions.

Under terms of the commitment, Lochbiller will remain in custody until he decides to answer the questions. A similar commitment was ordered by Judge Moynihan last week for Elmer "Buff" Ryan, Detroit race wire service operator.

The grand jury before which the inspector reported was the regular federal grand jury investigating income tax cases. A special federal grand jury, also in session, is considering evidence presented by a special staff from the attorney general's office at Washington.

40 Million Daily For U. S. Defense

Washington — (AP) — Working at a $40,000,000-a-day clip, the national defense commission has placed army and navy orders totaling $1,661,891,494 in the last 40 days.

The commission likewise reported far-flung progress in marshaling the nation's material resources, industrial facilities and manufacturing manpower for the mightiest peacetime defense undertaking in United States history.

President Roosevelt, releasing the first detailed reports of the commission's accomplishments to date, praised the record compiled and told his press conference yesterday that the progress was extremely good.

Mr. Roosevelt said he considered the reports of the seven commission members of greater importance than news from the Democratic national convention. Asked why, he countered:

"Wouldn't you put the safety of the country ahead of anybody's convention?"

The reports covered the six weeks the commission has been functioning.

Golfer Rescued From Walls of Stone Quarry

Easton, Pa. — (AP) — A search for the golf ball he lost in practice left Russell Armstrong, 22-year-old Lafayette college student stranded 10 yards from the top of the 200-foot high walls of a stone quarry.

Nearly 500 persons watched last night as firemen worked in the glare of powerful searchlights for two hours to rescue the climber.

Armstrong said he didn't have any trouble till he hit the last 10 yards, then couldn't move either way.

F.S.—He found the ball.

Foreign Policy Plank Delays Final Approval

Platform Vote Waits
As Fight Is Renewed
At Committee Meet

Chicago — (AP) — Final drafting of a plank on foreign policy tangled the Democratic platform committee in renewed controversy today and snarled plans for the convention program.

Senator Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky, convention chairman, said upon leaving a committee session that agreement had been reached to recess this afternoon scheduled convention session until 7 p. m., central standard time.

The platform had been scheduled to go before the 1 p. m. session, but the committee was so tied up on the war plank that a final draft was considered impossible of attainment until much later in the day.

Barkley declined to discuss events in the committee but it was learned that Senator Claude Pepper of Florida had started a determined fight to force inclusion in the foreign-policy declaration of a pledge for "full aid short of war" to Great Britain.

The fight over a war stand seemed to have been averted when the committee agreed last night upon a plank which was hailed by non-interventionists as "satisfactory." This group had threatened a floor battle.

Hope to Check Forest Fires

Flames in Montana
And Idaho May Be Controlled Tonight

Missoula, Mont. — (AP) — A battle against widespread forest fires in Montana and Idaho—a fight that claimed the life of an airplane pilot—appeared to be turning today in favor of the army of weary fire fighters.

Forest service officials who since Friday have sent 8,500 men into the timberlands to cope with nearly 1,000 lightning-started blazes said that all fires may be under control by tonight, barring adverse wind conditions.

The body of Robert Marichek, 28, Missoula manager for Northwest Airlines, who was killed Monday in a plane crash in the Bitter Root mountains of eastern Idaho, was brought by a horse pack train carried the dead pilot and his injured co-pilot, Dell Clabaugh of Missoula, to a landing field at Shearer, Idaho, from the remote crash scene.

Marichek and Clabaugh, while dropping supplies by parachute to men in the fire lines, were forced to attempt a landing when a down-draft caught their plane.

Corcoran Reelected, Catlin Doesn't Vote

Evidence that the factionalism which has characterized proceedings of the state conservation commission for more than a year continues unabated was seen here today when two of its members refused to participate in a vote which returned James Corcoran of Webster to the chairmanship of the body.

Corcoran has been under fire as commission chairman by the Heil administration's research bureau, and in recent meetings has wrangled frequently and bitterly with two of Heil's 1939 appointees, Mark Catlin of Appleton and Wally Adams of Conover. Today Adams and Catlin refrained from voting in an executive session in which Corcoran was reelected.

Catlin and Adams have been highly critical of key figures in the conservation department, and two weeks ago recommended dismissal for department officials who have been under scrutiny by the research division in connection with department land trades.

R. A. Fischer of Shawano was reelected secretary. Corcoran is a Democrat, and Fischer is a Progressive.

Horicon Marsh

Meanwhile marsh members reported that acquisition and development of famed Horicon marsh, which has been called the greatest natural water fowl area in the midwest and around which conservation aspirations in southern and eastern Wisconsin have revolved for two decades, is now assured and will probably be completed in the next two or three years.

With the use of direct federal appropriations and federal aid to the state conservation department under the Pittman-Robertson act, about 26,000 acres in the celebrated Dodge county wildlife area will become public property soon, Commissioner William J. P. Aberg of Madison informed the commission.

Although previous meetings of the conservation commission have produced "fireworks" in abundance, the session here today was calm and brief. The open meeting adjourned at noon, when commissioners went into executive session behind closed doors to reelect officers and to discuss the bitterly controversial investigation of the conservation, de-gelling hungry.

Leaders Say President Will Accept

Chicago Stadium — (AP) — Draft-Roosevelt sentiment blazed today with a fierceness which threatened to smother third-term opposition and leave unanswered only the question of how the president will be nominated.

As confidently as if President Roosevelt had said he would accept re-nomination, instead of only that he had "no wish to be a candidate," Secretary of Commerce Hopkins and other third-termers gathered to map the floor strategy for making Mr. Roosevelt the 1940 party choice.

Such details as whether to have a formal nominating speech, or simply let the preponderant Roosevelt delegate strength demonstrate

Farley May Remain As Committee Head

Chicago — (AP) — After a conference with Secretary of Commerce Hopkins, Frank C. Walker, former director of the national emergency council, told reporters today that he believed Postmaster General Farley might remain chairman of the Democratic national committee.

"Are you going to be the Democratic committee chairman?" Walker was asked.

"Jim Farley's my candidate," he replied.

"Do you think there's a possibility he may continue?" a reporter asked.

"Yes, I still think so," Walker answered.

itself when the roll is called, shared attention in the Hopkins group with last-minute polishing of the party platform.

What Mr. Roosevelt would do when nominated remained to be seen. New Deal lieutenants here confidently predicted that he would accept, and some even hinted at a presidential address to the convention by telephone from the White House.

Against Stampede

James A. Farley, national party chairman and a candidate himself, told reporters that any attempt to stampede the convention into choosing a nominee without a roll-call would "jeopardize the party's chances in the November election."

For himself, the postmaster general said his name would be present.

Any effort to prevent the name of any candidate from receiving consideration, he said, "will be badly received by the nation."

It was Farley's opposition in this boisterous convention hall last night which blocked a plan by Senator Pepper (D-Fla.) to move an immediate Roosevelt nomination by acclamation. By compromise, it was agreed to nominate tonight, instead of tomorrow night.

Farley said that Senator Glass, 63-year-old Virginian who arrived today, would nominate him and predicted that the names of Vice President Garner and Senator Wheeler (D-Mont.) also would go before the delegates.

After a brief conference with Farley, Glass told reporters:

"Mr. Farley has requested it and I will nominate him. It will be a brief and specific nomination."

The permanent chairman, Senator Alben Barkley, came in from the platform committee room down town this afternoon and arranged a brief schedule of routine and entertainment, since the platform drafters had not completed their work. He called the fifth session of the convention to order at 1:16 p. m. (C.S.T.), and Dr. A. M. McDonald, superintendent of the Chicago Baptist association, prayed for "preservation of our liberties and peace."

After the organ played The Star Spangled Banner, Miss Virginia Verrill, radio singer, led the delegates and spectators in "God Bless America."

The president of the Young Democrats of America, Homer Mat Adams of Illinois, fell in line with the "We want Roosevelt" cry when he told the delegates:

"We shall march forth into the 1940 campaign with the record of the Roosevelt administration as our banner."

Reciting the New Deal "record" for youth and adults, young Adams declared:

"America remembers and the overwhelming majority of its people still hold their devotion to the man who made it possible."

"It is ironic that some would call a halt. The Young Democrats of America are not willing to call a halt. They demand that the country press onward in the Roosevelt manner toward the Roosevelt objectives."

Secretary of Commerce Hopkins said he had "feeling and assurance" that "when the president is nominated he will accept."

For 25 minutes, the delegates had let loose a bedlam of shouting and marching last night when Senator

Badger Group Gets in Line For Roosevelt

3 Delegates Refrain From Demonstration; Reelect Mrs. Givan

Chicago —(7)— Wisconsin delegates to the Democratic national convention, with three notable exceptions, helped beat the drum for President Roosevelt in the demonstration which followed his "no wish to be a candidate" message last night.

Most of the Badger representatives were quick to get into the convention hall parade, trooping behind their standards and lending their lusty voices to the cry of "We want Roosevelt now."

The three who remained in their seats were John C. Dugan of La Crosse, John E. Flanagan of La Crosse, and Willis E. Donley of Menomonie, all pledged to Vice-President Garner for the presidential nomination.

"We'll do our parading when Garner is nominated," Flanagan asserted.

Caucusing in a more amicable setting than in the first meeting Sunday, the Wisconsin delegates last night returned Mrs. Louise N. Givan, of Milwaukee, to her post as national committeewoman and launched a movement to get out candidates for the September primary, with Minister John Cudahy in the lead as senatorial timber.

The selection of Mrs. Givan to serve her third term as national committeewoman climaxed a strong fight which was opened against her prior to the delegation's arrival at the convention, and was intensified for a time thereafter.

She came out of last night's caucus, a closed session, however, with 18 of the state's 24 delegate votes.

Mrs. Helen Marty, of Monroe, polled five votes, and Mrs. J. C. McCarty, of Portage, member of the state central committee, got the other one.

Miss Genevieve Blum, of Eau Claire, who staged a strong race for the committee post in Sunday night's caucus, asked that her name be withdrawn, and it did not figure in the balloting last night.

Willis Donley, Garner-pledged delegate from Menomonie, who had sponsored her cause, announced her withdrawal to the caucus. Miss Blum was selected as the alternate for Donley.

Alternate For Boyle
Mrs. Marty is the alternate for Edwin J. Boyle, of Burlington, who won his place in the delegate list in April placed in the DPOW Roosevelt slate put into the field by Gustave J. Keller, of Appleton, and Edward P. Curry, Milwaukee county Democratic chairman.

Mrs. McCarty is the alternate for Dr. Charles W. Henny, of Portage, named in April as a follower of the Roosevelt-Forley slate entered by Charles E. Broughton, national committeeman from Sheboygan.

Broughton was re-named to the national committee Sunday night, polling 16 votes against Cornelius T. Young's seven.

Intense campaigning in behalf of Mrs. Givan continued almost from the end of Sunday night's meeting. A group which changed its mind after slipping away from her banner Sunday night quietly button-holed other delegates and urged them to get behind her again, saying they felt repudiation would constitute too stiff "a slap in the face" after Broughton had been re-elected.

Both Broughton and Mrs. Givan had been the target of inter-delegation attacks, a great deal of that directed against the committeewoman based on her support of Paul V. McNutt.

The delegation's vote was made unanimous by acclamation after William B. Rubin, chairman, had announced the result of the only formal ballot taken.

To "Encourage" Candidate
The Badger delegation voted authorization for Rubin to name a committee to "encourage" strong candidates to file for state offices in the September 17 primary with special emphasis to be put upon an attempt to persuade Cudahy, of Milwaukee, United States minister to Belgium, to run for the senate.

Delegates declared that the move to bring Cudahy in the senatorial campaign did not constitute a formal endorsement of him, but it was made plain that he was considered the strongest candidate believed available for the race.

Named to the committee, which will work in conjunction with Broughton and Mrs. Givan, were Charles E. Hammersley, of Shorewood; John M. McGonigle, of Sun Prairie; Donley; Gerald Clifford, of Green Bay; Charles H. Caslin, of Stevens Point; Clarence E. Neuman, of Milwaukee; Young, and Anthony P. Gawronski, of Milwaukee. Such a lineup divides the committee evenly between delegates who entered the April election campaign in the opposing Broughton and Kelly-Curry camps. Rubin will serve ex-officio on the committee.

The Green Bay state convention suggested four candidates for the senatorial campaign: W. D. Carroll, of Prairie du Chien, chairman of the state central committee; Daniel Grady, veteran party man from Portage; Thomas J. O'Malley, former congressman, and Clifford. Clifford, it was revealed, told the delegation last night that he would not run.

The caucus saw the patching up by Chairman Rubin of his disagreement with Broughton. He congratulated the national committeeman on being returned to the position and promised to work with him. The chairman explained later that although he had "fought hard"

Wiley Says Nation Must Be Prepared For Economic War

Washington —(7)— Senator Wiley (R-Wis.) warned America today that it must go beyond meeting military defense needs and prepare for a possible future economic war. Predicting economic unification of Europe after the current conflict if the totalitarian powers are victorious, Wiley, in a statement, declared it was necessary to now prepare for that eventuality.

"It is true we are trying to formulate a 'pay as you go' plan for defense needs," he said. "That is splendid, but it is not enough. It does not make any long-range provision for meeting a possible European economic war after the military war is over."

With such unification, he said, trade competition between European countries would be eliminated and each permitted to make only that which it can produce most efficiently.

With this advantage, without restrictive legislation and without minimum wages, these nations probably could undersell other nations in the international markets, Wiley contended.

It also seemed possible, he said, that totalitarian powers might resort to "blackbucking" foreign nations into doing business with them.

Says Economics Cause Of War, Not Beliefs

Milwaukee —(7)— John W. Aiken, of Chelsea, Mass., socialist labor party nominee for president, charged last night that every major country of the world had attained its present position through aggression.

"Economic considerations dominate the foreign policies of all nations, the dictatorships as well as the democracies," he said. "The present conflict is primarily an economic one, and not at all ideological."

"Those who desire to plunge this country into war are attempting to generate a war hysteria, and, under the guise of defending freedom, are carrying out an attack on our civil liberties."

Aiken explained his party's plan and program of setting up industrial union government. He spoke at a rally here.

Two Democratic Women Prove That They Can Keep Secret

Chicago —(7)— Two Democratic women have proved that they can keep a secret.

Secretary of Labor Perkins and Mrs. Alben Barkley, wife of the Democratic convention's permanent chairman, knew what President Roosevelt's three-term message would be before Senator Barkley read it to the convention last night.

Mrs. Barkley was custodian of the secret for three hours when she sat on the convention platform with copies of the presidential message in her lap. They were given to reporters when the senator finished.

The multiplicity of favorite-son candidates for the Democratic vice presidential nomination has put some state delegations on the spot. Iowa, for example, is confronted with the possibility that both Secretary of Agriculture Wallace and Senator Hiram Johnson are native sons.

The Kentucky delegation, too, has discussed the possibilities of both Senator Barkley and Senator Chandler.

Bert Stand of Tammany Hall had no trouble in explaining why all the New York delegation didn't rush out into the Convention hall aisles to participate in the Roosevelt demonstration last night.

"It was hot," he said with a laugh, "but we were all cheering."

Many Democrats met at breakfast today to honor one of their greatest orators—William Jennings Bryan. Bryan made his famous "Cross of gold" speech here 44 years ago at the convention which nominated him for the presidency.

Diana Hopkins Only Interested in Badges
Chicago —(7)— Diana Hopkins, 71-year-old chum of President Roosevelt's, has her own ideas about the Democratic national convention.

She's staying at a farm just outside Chicago and talks by telephone with her daddy, Secretary Harry Hopkins, during lulls in convention maneuvering.

"Diana, do you want to come to the convention?" Hopkins asked her at one time.

"No!"

"Don't you want to be here when the president is nominated?"

"No."

"Don't you want to have anything to do with this convention?"

"Yes, I want all the badges and buttons you can find."

CONVENTION SHOUTS "WE WANT ROOSEVELT"—After a statement by Senator Alben W. Barkley, permanent chairman of the Democratic National convention, that President Roosevelt had no "desire or purpose" to run again, the convention broke out into a noisy demonstration, as shown here, with shouts of "We want Roosevelt" as its theme.

War Situation Today

Japan's New Cabinet Distracts Attention From Europe's War

America's interest in the Orient sharpened today—amid an ominous jolt in the European conflict—as Japan chose a new premier to carry out a policy of foreign expansion, and United States warships were believed speeding toward the far east.

Coincidentally, 3,000 Japanese residents in Shanghai held a mass meeting and urged Japanese military authorities to "demand the disarmament of United States marines" unless the marines apologize for the alleged mistreatment of Japanese gendarmes on July 7.

New complications arose, too, in Berlin, where authorized Nazi said the United States, following its expressed desire of keeping world trade lanes open, should "condemn" the British blockade against Germany and Italy.

Reports that Adolf Hitler is preparing a "last chance" offer to Britain—presumably a "surrender or be destroyed" ultimatum—were strengthened with the scheduled departure of Italy's foreign minister Ciano for Berlin.

The Japanese foreign office announced Britain has agreed to close the Burma road—China's main line of war supplies—and also shut off the flow of arms traffic into China from the British crown colony of Hongkong.

China, however, has insisted she will not give up the fight against Japan, despite these amputations. In the European war theater, the German high command reported bad weather reduced air attacks on Britain, but Nazi planes flew high over the island kingdom again this morning and heavy explosions were heard in a southeast town.

Newspapers in London flared black headlines over stories under New York or Rome date-lines that Germany may start her invasion this Friday night from a 1,200-mile front along the English channel ranging from Brest, France, to Bergen, Norway.

Sharing the spotlight with the Far Eastern situation was the totally unexpected action of Spain in severing diplomatic relations with Chile.

The Spanish government said it had acted because an anti-nationalist campaign in Chile had "reached intolerable limits."

The Chilean government expressed surprise and indicated it was at a loss to account for Spain's action. Three German bombers were shot down over the English channel during a series of new raids on British shores yesterday. The British air force raided German-held coast positions and bombed oil supplies at Hanover.

St. Joseph School to Construct Vestibule

A permit to build a vestibule in St. Joseph school, W. Lawrence street, was issued today by John A. Pierre, building inspector. The addition will be 19.3 feet by 20.

W. A. Holt, 417 N. Durkee, will build a frame addition to his house at a cost of about $60.

Orville Schilhab, 1813 W. Hariman street, will construct a garage, 12 feet by 20, at a cost of approximately $175.

Children Playing With Matches In Garage Cause Fire

Children playing with matches in the private garage owned by Joseph Obermeier, 912 W. Spring street, started a fire that caused damage estimated at more than $200 about 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon.

Appleton firemen extinguished the fire before it caused much damage to the garage itself, but the flames destroyed stoves and screen windows, cushions, garden tools and damaged a trailer housed in the garage.

The smart thing for Herr Hitler to do now is try to make peace—the winner keep all. Even if he gets the robuff he probably expects, he will have made that gesture for the world to see.

If the British can withstand that initial "blood-bath," they will have a chance to defeat the Nazis. Time will work for England.

Germans Confident
From Berlin comes word that the German people are serene and utterly confident that nazidom can crush Britain. And across the channel the Britons believe they can cope with the most powerful war-machine ever constructed—the machine which already has overrun a huge section of Europe and utterly crushed their French ally.

The calm, almost detached, attitude shown by the English people in the face of this impending avalanche provides a psychological study that fascinates me. The position is rather well illustrated by an experience I had during the World war, when I was attached to British general headquarters in France as war correspondent.

I was racing across country by motor one afternoon to get to the scene of a great battle. The English soldier who was driving my car suddenly applied his screaming brakes and pulled up at a little wayside inn. I asked him what the matter was, and he said he wanted a cup of tea—the most important thing, by the way, in the ordinary life of an Englishman.

"My gosh," I exploded, "you don't mean to tell me you're going to stop here and drink tea with that big battle going on?"

"I'm sorry, sir," he replied with quiet dignity, "but it's 4 o'clock and I must have my tea."

The other day I received a letter from a firm of Lloyd's insurance brokers in London. I had allowed a trifling insurance to lapse (the annual premium was only about $5), and the brokers inquired courteously if they could look after my interests by renewing the policy.

The letter was dated June 11. That was the day that the French government fled from Paris to Tours. The Germans were only a dozen miles from the capital. The allies' whole world was being pulled down about their ears. Still London pursued its methodical course.

An English friend of mine here in New York cabled her sister in London, urging that she come here with her small daughter. The sister replied that she was doing useful war-work and so felt her place was in England. The little girl would remain at home, because the family wanted to "see it through together."

Last month, in the midst of the battle of Paris and after the terrors of Flanders, the British house of commons passed a colonial development and welfare act. This provides for the expenditure of $350,000,000 for the development of all the 40 colonies, and the work is going on.

So Britain trudges doggedly and calmly forward to meet her fate in the coming battle.

Peace Bid Likely to be Mere Hitlerian Gesture

British Take Calm Attitude as They Await 'Total' Warfare by Germany

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

New York —(7)—Should Herr Hitler offer the British some sort of peace terms before attempting to "annihilate" them, as Rome and Berlin think may happen, it will to my mind be largely a gesture calculated to show nazidom in a magnanimous light, and justify the "total" war which must follow.

Only last Sunday British Premier Churchill declared in no uncertain terms that England will "tolerate no parleys." Observers generally believe he means that—and probably the fuhrer does, too.

Still, the Nazi chieftain has everything to gain and little that he can't afford to lose by such a move. It certainly would be a great day for him if he could inveigle Churchill into accepting a peace which would allow Germany to retain all the fruits of conquest and regain the colonies which Britain took after the World war.

No man could be shown a greater kingdom than that from the top of the world's highest mountain.

Would Assure Gains
To be sure, Hitler would be foregoing his ambition to dismember the British empire and thus make his hegemony of Europe complete. But he would be insuring the vast gains which he has made already—and after all, while he undoubtedly is confident, he has no absolute assurance that he can defeat Britain.

If he should run into a stone-wall in his forthcoming assault and lose the war, he also would forfeit everything he has achieved in his seven amazing years of power. So would his ally, Mussolini.

The smart thing for Herr Hitler to do now is try to make peace—the winner keep all. Even if he gets the robuff he probably expects, he will have made that gesture for the world to see.

If the British can withstand that initial "blood-bath," they will have a chance to defeat the Nazis. Time will work for England.

North, South In Agreement On Delegates

Compromise Dispute Over Apportionment In Future Conclaves

Chicago —(7)— The south and north compromised today their differences over delegate reapportionment to future Democratic national conventions.

This resulted in rules committee approval of a plan for a bonus of two delegates-at-large for each state going Democratic in a presidential election.

The plan was to be submitted to the convention for expected acceptance today.

The compromise overturned a national committee proposal calling for only one additional delegate. Each state now has four delegates-at-large.

The compromise plan also provided that reapportionment be turned back to the national committee for further study before the 1944 convention, in accordance with the "instructions" of the 1936 convention after it had abolished the two-thirds nominating rule.

Southern delegates contended before the rules committee that consideration should have been given to basing future bonuses on Democratic strength in congressional districts as well as states, but northerners successfully argued that "districts" were not mentioned in the 1936 resolution on the matter.

The rules committee also reversed the national committee by restoring for future conventions the present delegate strength to several territories.

The national committee had recommended that Hawaii and Alaska be cut from six to three delegates and the Philippines, Canal Zone (now with six each) and the Virgin Islands (now with 1) have none in future.

RAILROAD EXECUTIVE AT TRAFFIC CLUB JAMBOREE—When about 200 attended the annual golf jamboree of Fox Valley Traffic club at Butte des Morts Country club yesterday afternoon and evening, one of the guests was R. L. Williams, chief executive of Chicago and Northwestern railroad. Snapped on a green during the afternoon golf events was Williams with three officials of paper concerns in this area. Business Upturn in Fall, Rail Executive Says Stopping in Appleton as part of a Wisconsin "acquaintance tour," R. L. Williams, chief executive officer of Chicago and Northwestern railroad, predicted that fall would see a business upturn.

Williams arrived in Appleton Tuesday morning, spending most of the day at Butte des Morts Country club, where Fox Valley Traffic club held its annual golf jamboree. About 200 railroad officials and Fox Valley industrial leaders took part.

In preparation for the expected upturn the North Western line is undertaking a freight car rehabilitation program, stated Williams, who has been its chief officer for not quite a year.

National defense outlays are expected to have a large part in the fall business upswing. The North Western line is cooperating in this program, not with direct production, but by providing efficient transportation schedules for raw materials and finished products, Williams said. No appreciable effect of the defense appropriations has yet been felt, but effects should be noticeable within several months and reach a maximum within a year, he added.

Impressed by City
Appleton had impressed him as a progressive city of homeowners, with community spirit showing in the constant building and painting. Butte des Morts golf course he characterized as "darn hard for a dub."

Frank B. Keefe, Oshkosh congressman, described several acts now before congress at the banquet last night following the golfing events. He explained particularly the bills providing for military training and spoke on the country's finances.

Heber Pelkey of Appleton led afternoon prize winners with a 76 low gross score, followed by W. F. Kerfin, Green Bay, 77, and Clyde Raybourne, Milwaukee, 78. O. B. Basche, Appleton, and O. W. Johnson, Rhinelander, connected for the longest drives. Russell Leroux of Appleton won the blind bogey prize.

Fred A. Semmelhack, Appleton agent for Chicago and Northwestern railroad, acted as master of ceremonies and presented the awards. George Thompson, Menasha Soo line general freight agent, was chairman for the day.

Red Cross Chapter Requests Donations To War Relief Fund

Mrs. Mabel O. Shannon, executive secretary of the county chapter of the American Red Cross quoting Miss Melva Bakkie, Red Cross nutritionist, said today that "continuation of war throughout the fall harvest will bring Europe to the doorstep of famine."

The Red Cross is trying to raise 20 million dollars to furnish food and clothing for refugees and the county's share is $6,000. So far donors have contributed about $4,500 and Mrs. Shannon today urged everyone who has not contributed to do so as soon as possible.

Miss Bakkie said malnutrition already is beginning to jeopardize the general health of Europe for years to come. The war has reduced food production and has limited distribution channels until the rations of millions are below the sustenance standards.

Plan Decision on Coal Freight Case

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
Madison—A decision of the public service commission on two important coal freight rates cases will be forthcoming within 30 days, commission authorities said today.

Appeal of Milwaukee, Marinette, Sturgeon Bay and other coal dock operators for rate equality with Green Bay dock dealers on shipments to the Neenah-Menasha industrial market is under consideration by the commission. The petitioners maintain that for 50 years before last year's rate change by the commission they enjoyed parity with Green Bay shippers. The present advantage in favor of Green Bay is 10 cents a ton.

The commission also has under advisement a recent rate change on coal shipments by the Green Bay and Western railroad to central Wisconsin points.

"Elijah" to be Bay Spectacle

Presented on July 28 In Open Air Theater; Love in Title Role

With several people in the Appleton area in the cast, the Green Bay Press-Gazette is presenting "Elijah," Mendelssohn's immortal "story of the ages," Sunday evening, July 28, in the open air amphitheater at City Stadium. Tickets for the production may be bought at the Appleton Post-Crescent office.

A cast of many hundreds will appear. Exciting dramatic action moves throughout the 2-hour program, and the huge chorus of about 400 voices rises and falls in the tremendous music mood which runs the gamut from lyric plains and supplications to shouts of victory and Thanksgiving. Throughout the beautiful Mendelssohn music is played by a carefully selected orchestra of 75 artists.

The title role of "Elijah" will be sung by Mark Love, celebrated baritone soloist of Chicago Civic Opera fame and of the radio and concert stage. He has sung the part more than 200 times under famous conductors and with great choral bodies. Charles Sears, staff soloist of National Broadcasting company, has the tenor role, with Louisa Hoe, protégée of Mary Garden, the soprano.

Pegler Gives Some History About Mr. Mike Carrozzo

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER

Chicago—Of the many distinguished Chicagoans who served today as hosts to the party of humanity in a scene of unimaginable political and civic squalor, it seems conservative to state that none contributed to a more robust individual smell to the general stench than Mr. Mike Carrozzo, a noted leader of the American Federation of Labor and a man of great power in the Chicago city hall.

Mr. Carrozzo is an old-time habitue of that historic scene of vice which existed for many years in the south side district around Twenty-second street and which in its day was known as the levee or the line. His personal history, entered in the documentary files of the United States government, records that in the period between 1910 and 1917 he lived in the 2100 block on Michigan avenue, and later at an address on Twenty-second street, both in the very midst of a patch given over exclusively to the business of prostitution. He was there a bodyguard of the late Jim Colisimo, the immigrant who introduced chain-store methods to the brothel industry in the United States, and in later years he became an intimate of Al Capone and the latter-day gorillas whose influence on the morals and government of the second city is still predominant in all phases of its political and administrative affairs.

Mr. Carrozzo is now a prominent local statesman, a prominent leader in the American Federation of Labor, with the hearty approval of William Green, and a country gentleman with his own herds of bloody dairy stock and swine and a stable of steeds which race under his colors in Saratoga and Miami when the criminal scum are there. He is a gunman, and was once indicted for a murder of a comrade in the labor racket. But beat the rap as, indeed, he beat the gun-rap, wherein it was shown that he was an honorary or nominal member of the fish and game department, on his way to inspect a theoretical mess of fish at hypothetical risk of his life.

Mayor Edward Kelly has this in common with his fellow humanitarian—that he once was subjected to the harassment of an indictment by forces which doubtless were opposed to his humane works. State indictments are trivial botherations in the politics of Chicago and Illinois, however, so, like Mr. Carrozzo, the mayor easily beat the rap. The state's attorney withdrew the case.

Amassed Great Wealth by Fortune Investments

Later this selfless servant of the people had income-tax trouble; and in his own vast appreciation of the opportunities enjoyed by a poor boy in the land of the free, made a substantial cash settlement—which was, indeed, noble of him. In that case it emerged that Mr. Kelly, although employed in the public service at a moderate salary, had amassed great wealth by "fortunate investments."

Mr. Carrozzo at present is under indictment again, this time in connection with Thurman Arnold's attempt to break up collusion between crooked contractors, crooked politicians in the city hall and labor racketeers in the paving industry in Chicago. Moreover, his influence, as indicated by his relative recent acquisition of his country estate and his farm and stables, has tweaked the interest of the internal revenue department, the more so because his economic rise coincided roughly with a great and sudden increase in the cost of paving at the expense of the American people through the WPA. It is not surprising that Mr. Carrozzo's love of humanity, as represented by the party

Present Traffic Measure to City Council Tonight

Taxi Cab Limitations Also on Slate; Bids on Four Projects Up

Passage of the ordinance creating a traffic bureau in Appleton and making $1 the fine for nine separate traffic violations will be recommended by the ordinance committee as the council meets tonight.

May 30 the council adopted a resolution reducing parking fines to $1. Since then Judge Thomas H. Ryan, municipal court judge, has demanded an ordinance covering the changes before he will alter the present setup. The measure was presented to the council July 3 and has since been published.

Two other measures will be recommended for passage by the ordinance group. One proposes a limit of one taxi cab for every 1,000 persons in the city, raising the minimum age for cab drivers from 18 to 21, and the other eliminates a clause forcing a man to live in Appleton a year before he may secure a tavern license.

Other Recommendations
The board of public works will recommend acceptance of bids for paving the Wisconsin avenue intersection at Meade street, buying a 14-ton truck for the street department, installing plumbing at the Spencer street stadium, and installing sewer laterals at Superior and Winnebago streets.

Purchase of land to add nine holes to the city golf course also is expected to be considered. May 30 the council gave the park board permission to spend about $12,000 to purchase the needed land adjacent to the course, about 52 acres. Since then the park board and finance committee have conferred and worked out the method of financing but no report has been made to the aldermen.

Final hearings on seven curb and gutter district assessments will be held. A petition against the assessment on Mary street from North to Pacific street has been filed.

Seymour to Build Addition to Plant

Seymour—The public service commission today authorized the city of Seymour to install a water softener and iron remover to its purification plant, according to E. B. Dean, city clerk.

The addition will cost $4,000 and is intended to make Seymour's artesian well water more usable. Presently the water is hard and contains a considerable amount of iron. Dean said the city council is expected to advertise for bids on project soon.

Youth Administration Funds Allotted State

Washington—The National Youth Administration allocated today $23,240,281 to finance U. S. student work during 1940-41.

Officials said the allocations would furnish part time work for about 500,000 needy students between 16 and 24, inclusive, to enable them to continue their education. They said $12,508,161 would be used to provide employment for secondary school students and $13,731,120 to provide employment for college students.

The NYA also allocated $100,000 for the special program to aid Negro college and graduate students.

Secondary school students will earn $3 to $6 a month; college undergraduates, $10 to $20, and graduate students, $10 to $30.

Allocations by states (first figure for school work program, second for college and graduate work program) included: Michigan, $465,140 and $558,260; Wisconsin, $289,580 and $405,405.

Fined $5, Costs for Passing Bogus Check

Lester L. Colling, 30, route 3, Appleton, was fined $5 and costs for passing a worthless check when he was arraigned before Judge Thomas H. Ryan this morning in municipal court. The fine was set at $10 but was reduced when Colling made restitution and paid complaint charges of $2.78. H. A. Honeywell, 433 Prospect avenue, made the complaint.

Tavern Licenses Issued in Excess of Law Unacceptable

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau Madison—The new state tavern limitation law, which has caused some confusion in recent months among local government authorities, was further clarified today with the announcement by Chief John W. Roach of the beverage tax division that licenses issued in excess of the legal limit will be considered null.

Any operator of a tavern granted a permit under such circumstances, Roach explained, can and will be prosecuted by the beverage tax division for operating without a license.

The 1939 limitation law holds the number of taverns to the number of licenses in effect on July 1, 1939, or to the ratio of one to each 500 of the municipality's population. Roach said that thus far the department he heads has discouraged the granting of about 50 liquor licenses by reminding licensing authorities of the possibility of prosecution. There has yet been no actual prosecution, he said.

Safety Council Maps Radio Series Plans

Development of a program of radio broadcasts to further the safety program in Outagamie county was authorized by the Outagamie County Safety council at a meeting last night at the courthouse.

The publicity committee was placed in charge of the project and will report progress at the next meeting.

The council instructed its secretary to contact the Brown County board to find out the cost and the propaganda value of the safety board, showing accident fatalities, on the lawn of the Brown County courthouse.

Ponder Action To Throw Out Slot Machines

Northern Wisconsin Residents Complain To Attorney General

BY JOHN WYNGAARD

Madison—Attorney General John E. Martin, following the receipt of complaints from citizens of the northern counties, is contemplating some form of action against slot machine gambling in the northern resort region, it was reported reliably here today.

Like every other state attorney general in recent years, Martin has received periodic complaints about non-enforcement of the state gambling laws in the northern counties. A recent incident involving a citizen who filed a formal complaint has brought about conferences in the attorney general's office to study what action is available to his department in attacking the problem.

According to the report, a Vilas county resident recently complained to Martin about slot machines in his locality. Martin advised him, it is said, to make his complaint to Edmund Drager, Vilas county district attorney, and then advised the prosecutor to act upon it.

Later the complainant advised Martin that he had been attacked and beaten after his complaint was filed.

Members of Martin's office staff would not be quoted on the reports here today, although they acknowledged that they were correct, and that action on the slot machine situation may be taken soon.

Two possible methods of approach are being considered, it was learned. Under the statutes any citizen may file a petition with the governor alleging that local enforcement officers are negligent in enforcing the laws. The governor can then commence removal proceedings. Under the law, the attorney general can also act for the "abatement of nuisances," it was pointed out.

Felt Pressure
Three years ago, it was recalled, under Attorney General Loomis and Governor LaFollette, the disbarment of county sheriffs and justices which such removal proceedings were threatened.

The slot machine problem is an ancient and troublesome one in state politics.

It is customarily argued that complete enforcement of the law will never be attained in the northern recreational counties because local interests who cater to the resort trade feel gambling devices are needed in their business. With local enforcement officials responsive to public opinion, enforcement is difficult, if not unobtainable, it has been pointed out.

Yet complete repeal of the anti-gambling laws is equally unobtainable because the northern counties represent only a fraction of the voting strength in the state legislature.

partment's activities by the state research bureau under Governor Heil's direction.

Although members declined to disclose the nature or the conclusion of their discussions in the closed session, one member reported that Governor Heil had personally requested his appointees to postpone any action which might be suggested by the research bureau's disclosures on conservation department land exchange policies pending the conclusion of the investigation by the bureau. It was revealed, however, that members had discussed possible dismissal or disciplinary action against those department officials who have been under attack by Director August Fry of the research unit for their actions in allegedly illegal land trades with department employees.

Aberg explained that certification of the Horicon marsh project could not be completed by the 1940 deadline on July 1, and that the department had accordingly substituted projects involving research in deer, grouse, pheasant and waterfowl for its share of 1940 Pittman-Robertson receipts, which the federal government pro-rates from the tax on arms and ammunition.

In the future, however, the Madison member said, the state can expect about $80,000 annually from this source, conditioned upon the state's appropriation of a one-quarter share.

He disclosed that after negotiations the average price of the marsh land has been brought down to $5 an acre, and that options on considerable acreages have already been taken. At that price, assuming complete allocation of the funds, the marsh project could be financed in less than three years, he explained.

Present Plan

The plan now approved calls for direct federal acquisition of the northern half of the marsh, about 13,000 acres, which would become an inviolate wildlife sanctuary under the supervision of the biological survey.

The southern half would be acquired by the state under the federal aid program, and eventually up to half of that area would be opened to public hunting, he explained.

Commissioner Catlin asserting that he had other nominations for hunting ground projects under the Pittman-Robertson program, wanting assurance that the state isn't pledging all the aid receipts for the Horicon marsh hunting ground.

Among the allotments, by states, was:

Wisconsin: Army—Sparta, Camp McCoy, $50,000.

Aberg said that the commission could allocate the receipts each year as it sees fit.

Catlin said that he would propose state acquisition of a 10,000 acre tract about 20 miles north of Appleton between the Wolf and Embarras rivers known as the Black Slough and naturally suited for ducks and pheasants. The area is now leased to the state by the county board, which holds the title to the tract. The Appleton member said that many hunters in the Fox river valley section are complaining about the "acute" scarcity of hunting grounds and demanding that the state take action to provide facilities.

Singers Interested in Quartet Tournament

Several Appleton fellows who like to gather 'round and harmonize to the old songs today expressed interest in the Barbershop Quartet tournament, that the Post-Crescent has proposed for the latter part of August.

The Post-Crescent asked and received some advice from them and promised that they would spread the word around among other fellows who are responsible for the comeback the Barbershop Quartet has been making in American life recently.

It's going to be a strictly informal affair, with the public invited. There will be no regulations on what songs shall be sung; that decision will be up to the quartets. It seems, from the opinion expressed today, that the best idea is to let each quartet sing two or three songs. No required numbers.

So dig out that old brown derby, gentlemen. Wrap your arms around your neighbor's shoulders and give out with those traditional tunes of conviviality like "Sweet Adeline" and "Golden Slippers" and "Sweet Sixteen". Then, after you have found a workable combination, get them interested in the Barbershop Quartet tournament which will be held in Appleton late in August, details to come later.

City Council To Readvertise For Truck Bids

Car Dealers State That Specifications Were Too Limited

Kaukauna—Garbage collection by the city received another setback last night when the city council voted to readvertise for bids for a 11-ton truck chassis with cab and for a fully enclosed loading garbage collection body.

Only one bid for each item was received by the council so the council moved to return the bid, set up new specifications, and re-advertise for bids, with the board of public works being authorized to set the date when the bids are to be due.

The mayor then will call a special meeting to award the contract. City Clerk L. J. Brenzel told the council that he had been told the reason one bid was received for each item was because the specifications were so drawn up that only one manufacturer could meet the requirements.

Representatives of several automobile dealers told the aldermen that under the specifications as advertised, they would be unable to submit a bid for the truck chassis, but that if the specifications were changed, they might be able to bid on the truck.

"The board of public works didn't know that the requirements would fit only one make of car. We advertised in good faith, thinking that all manufacturers could have bids on the truck," the city clerk explained.

The city attorney then was asked how much time would be required between the time bids are advertised for and the date they are returnable, so that the purchase of a garbage truck would not be delayed too long. He informed them that there should be at least 10 days elapsing between the date of the advertisement and the time returnable.

The board of public works expects to have the new specifications within several days so that municipal garbage collection would not be delayed for too long a time.

Frank is district governor-elect for District 27B of the Lions and Goetzman is cabinet secretary-treasurer for the district and secretary of the local club.

They will visit in New Orleans and then drive to Key West, Florida, where they will sail for Havana on Sunday, to spend the next five days. They will leave Havana on July 27, returning here about August 1, stopping at Miami on the way home.

The counties comprising District 27B are Outagamie, Brown, Door, Winnebago, Fond du Lac, Calumet, Waupaca, and Manitowoc counties.

Railroad Officials Make Kaukauna Visit

Kaukauna—The chief executive officer of the Chicago and North Western railroad, R. L. Williams, together with some of the company's officers, made a 2-hour inspection of the railroad property here yesterday.

Williams was accompanied by F. G. Fitzpatrick, Chicago, chief traffic officer; A. E. Ladwig, Chicago, general freight agent; F. B. Martin, Green Bay, division freight and passenger agent; and J. E. Kircher, Green Bay, traveling agent.

Child Injured When Struck by Bicycle

Kaukauna—Susanne Berens, 21, 910 Desnoyer street, received a bruised hip and loosened teeth when struck by a bicycle ridden by Kenneth Nimers, 15, of 809 Oviatt street. The accident occurred Monday evening in front of the Berens home.

Gantter Wants Council Probed, Council Wants Gantter Probed

Kaukauna—What started out to be a demand by Mayor William J. Gantter to have an investigation of the sale by the city council of the old Outagamie Paper company mill to Joseph and Abe Cohen of Chicago, boomeranged last night to wind up in the council's demanding that the mayor be investigated for not having secured a license to sell cigarettes since he opened up his store several months ago.

The mill was sold to the Cohen brothers last March for $4,000. It carried a tax evaluation of approximately $50,000. The mill had been purchased by the city to secure the water rights for the power project and the mill was sold in hopes that somebody would start operations of the plant there.

At the council meeting last night Mayor Gantter demanded that the mill be returned to the city on the grounds that the Cohens had not lived up to their contract.

"It was stipulated in the contract," the mayor told the council, "that the plant begin operations within 90 days. Those 90 days ended a month ago and nothing has been done to get the mill ready for operation. And it doesn't look like it will operate."

"The windows still are broken and haven't been replaced. The machinery still is rusty."

"I can't find anything in the contract that benefits the city of Kaukauna. Everything benefits the Cohen brothers. I even question the financial status and assets of the Cohen brothers," the mayor went on.

Wants Mill Returned
"I want the mill returned to the city of Kaukauna. Because there was no competitive bidding, I maintain the contract selling them the mill is null and void."

"I understand," the mayor continued, "that there were several meetings behind closed doors wherein certain stipulations were asked to be taken out of the contract."

"I have two industries that will buy the mill and will take it over tomorrow if the city can get the return of the mill. I ask the city attorney now to give me a written opinion as to whether the transaction was legal."

"I believe there should have been a referendum of the taxpayers before the property could be sold. I am going to investigate the matter further and take it up with the attorney-general."

"You can tell me now, or later in private, if any stipulations have been taken out," the mayor concluded.

Alderman Edward R. Steidl immediately leaped to his feet and answered the mayor. "I don't think we have anything to confess. There was a stipulation taken out but that was that they should employ 200 men in five years. No one knows ahead of time how many men he can employ several years later. That was a silly provision so it was taken out."

"Moreover," Steidl continued, "I don't know of any secret meetings being held and I think that I attended every one."

No Water or Power
Alderman George E. Proper came to the aid of his fellow councilman and told the mayor that it would be impossible for the Cohens to operate the mill as there is neither water nor power there now.

"He never made an application for water or power," the mayor retorted.

Alderman Jule Mertes then reviewed to the council how the city had been looking for buyers for the mill for many years and had been unable to find one. Finally, last March the Cohens purchased the plant, he said.

"Mr. Cohen is under a $5,000 bond whereby he can't sell the plant unless it will be operated as a paper mill, and that he cannot remove anything from the mill unless it be replaced with something better. At the time Mr. Cohen bought the mill he said he wanted to rebuild the machines for greater speed and that he was trying to buy some cheap," Mertes said.

The city clerk, L. J. Brenzel, rallied to the stand taken by the council saying that there was no contract involved at the time the provisions were removed.

Supports Clerk
Harry F. McAndrews supported the stand of the city clerk and told

Officials Display Musical Ability on Good Will Caravan

Kaukauna—Those who didn't know of the musical ability of several city officials came in for a surprise Monday on the good will caravan advertising the sequentennial and historical pageant to be held here in August.

Following a picnic dinner at Menominee park in Oshkosh, Mayor William J. Gantter picked up a cornet. Postmaster R. H. McCarty borrowed a drum, Adolph Mills, secretary of the planning board, grabbed a horn, and James Judd, agriculture teacher at the high school, secured a baritone horn. And away they went on an unrehearsed "jam session."

When the tour reached Hilbert, the village president was no where to be found on the streets. Asking where the president was the tour was told he was up the street always. They found him—down a hole—down in a manhole where he had been working on a sewer. With overalls dripping with mud he welcomed the group.

"You see," he said, "we have to do our own work. We don't have any WPA to do it for us."

The delegation of 38, of which 22 were from the Kaukauna High school band, visited 12 cities in the Fox River valley Monday, inviting them all to attend the sequentennial events and the historical pageant.

Willkie's Record in Business Helps Him

BY DR. GEORGE GALLUP
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J.—To shed light on the meteoric rise of Wendell Willkie in national popularity, the American Institute has just completed a survey in which voters in all sections of the country and in all income levels were asked whether they thought Willkie would make a good President.

Both those who thought he would and those who thought he would not were asked why they felt so. Their reasons are particularly revealing because they show that the feeling against big business, which was current five or six years ago has been substantially altered. In fact, over half of those voters who think Willkie would make a good President say it is because "he has been a successful businessman and a good executive."

Moreover, even among those voters who oppose him, the chief reason cited is "lack of experience"

New Equipment Will Cost $1,533; Low Bids are Accepted

New London — Bids of two New London concerns were accepted by the common council last night for the purchase of two new boilers and a stoker for the city hall building at a total cost of $1,532. The bids were the lowest of those submitted. Six bidders quoted prices on the boiler installation and that of F. J. Schultz was accepted at $1,532. The bid of the Pribnow Electric company for a stoker for $320 was the lowest of nine, mostly local.

The question of buying only one large boiler instead of two was brought up but the proposal was discouraged by A. J. Herres, high school janitor, who pointed out that the remodeling of the boiler room and that heightening of the room would entail more expense and delay, also that a standby unit is almost indispensable in a public building in case of failure of any part of the boiler or circulation system during cold weather.

At the suggestion of Alderman Theodore Thomas, Mayor Lynn Springmire named the board of public works as a committee to work with the committee of the New London Advancement association to investigate the feasibility and possibility of securing a government airport in this city under the recently announced defense program. On the board are Thomas, William Behm and Frank Meating.

Tavern operators' licenses were granted to Floyd Dudley, August Krueger, Emil Fritz and Matthew Burton.

Arthur Glocke appeared before the council to petition in person for the construction of a sidewalk in front of his home but no action was taken. City Attorney Ormond W. Capener explained the matter already had been decided against by the council and that body did not see fit to change its decision. Glocke's is the only home in his block on Smith street that faces west and adjoining property owners decline to bear the expense of a walk which is of no use to them, it was explained.

Alfred Popke appeared to petition that he be retained as part time caretaker's assistant at Floral Hill cemetery. He explained he had been discharged recently to make room for relief labor because he lived outside the city. He pointed out that the cemetery was used by urban and rural persons alike and that he had an interest in the grounds. The matter was referred to the cemetery committee.

Takes Lone Hold on First Place in Loop With 11 to 10 Win

Standings: W. L.
Plywood 3 0
Edison Shop 2 0
Edison Office 2 1
Methodist Men 1 2
Luft's Sluggers 0 2
Beckman's All Stars 0 3

New London — A home run by Ed Handschke in the sixth frame with Ken Greenlaw on base spelled a tight 11 to 10 victory for the Plywood and the first defeat for the Edison. Office in a second half game last night. Both teams are still contenders for the first half title. The game was tied at 9-all in the fifth and the Edison's crawled ahead one in the first of the sixth but the Plywood came back with the winning runs and then held the Edison's scoreless in the first of the seventh.

The Methodist Men won their first game of the season with a 9 to 7 margin over Beckman's All Stars. A 4-run rally in the last inning did the trick after they trailed 7 to 5 for three innings. Hank Christensen and Dave Wilson pitched for the victors with Earl Webb and Art Bunke tossing for the losers.

Thursday night the Plywoods will seek another win over the All Stars and the Edison Woodshop will test Luft's Sluggers.

Award Contract For School to Firm at Duluth

St. Patrick Church Building Expected to Cost About $145,000

Menasha—The W. C. Smith Construction company, Duluth, Minn., has been awarded the contract to construct St. Patrick's church's new school and social center, it was announced today.

The Duluth company was the low bidder, and the amount of the bid was about $145,000.

At a joint meeting of the building and finance committees this week, C. W. Nelson, chairman of the former group, submitted three plans of construction, and the committees selected one of them.

That plan provides for construction of a two-story building with a maximum of 50 pupils. In addition, there will be three project rooms and a library in the building. The heating plant has been designed so that it may later be used as a central heating plant not only for the school but also for the church. The coal storage bins will be placed underground. Stokers will feed the boilers.

It is expected that construction of the new building will take about six months and arrangements will be made to hold classes elsewhere when school opens next fall.

The building will consist of two floors and basement. The exterior walls will be of brick construction, and all of the latest developments in interior construction in sound proofing, ventilating and heating will be used.

The committee is headed by Miss Edna Robertson and includes A. J. Armstrong, principal of Menasha high school, Miss Evelyn Scholl, Neenah school nurse, H. M. Bishop, director of the Twin City Relief department and Marvin Dubbe, superintendent of the Children's Country Home.

About 70 organizations in the Twin Cities have filed completed questionnaires with the survey committee but more organizations have yet to report and the committee is urging the groups to file reports as soon as possible. It is important that all groups are included in the directory to make it complete and successful, committee members stated.

Aims and Purposes

The survey committee reported it had observed that some of the local groups have been reluctant to report because of misunderstanding about the council's aims and purposes. The Twin City council will have no control over funds or programs of any organization and does not propose to dictate or even suggest policies, members said. The directory of social service groups in Neenah and Menasha that are available for welfare work should make it possible to avoid duplication of service and give aid to a greater majority of people.

One of the facts brought out through the survey and one that is little known is the exceptional amount of service given employees by industry in the Twin Cities through protective measures, insurance benefits and general employee welfare programs.

As the questionnaires have come in, Miss Robertson has filed them under such general heads as education, family and child welfare, public assistance, public health and safety, religious welfare units and industry. The committee's job next month will be to list each agency in Neenah and Menasha for the directory, write compact general information about the services it offers and complete an index. The Twin City council has authorized the committee to have directories printed for distribution by early fall.

Mayor Jensen Asks for Study Of Park Budget

Seeks Report on Memorial Building; Council Votes Audit

Menasha—Charging a shortage of more than $900 in the account, Mayor William Jensen at a meeting of the council last night at city hall told aldermen that the money appropriated to the park board shouldn't be used to maintain the Memorial building.

The mayor emphasized that he wasn't questioning the honesty of the park board or the park superintendent. "In fact," he pointed out, "they are just as anxious to get the matter straightened out as we are."

"We should determine whether the Memorial building is making or losing money or breaking even," the mayor stressed. "I'm not condemning anyone, but it is costing us $125 a month to keep the building going. The Fifth ward park is the coming park, and if I'd have my say, I'd sell Smith park and use the money to expand the other park."

The council voted to have auditors who are working on city books audit the books of the park board and Memorial building and submit a report to the council.

Carnival Gets Permit

The council virtually rescinded its action at a special meeting last week when it granted the Hennies carnival a permit to load at the Milwaukee road depot on Sixth street.

At last week's meeting, the council adopted an ordinance providing for a $200-permit to load and unload carnivals in the city as well as a liability bond, and then it refused the Oriental band of the James P. Hawley post, Neenah American Legion, a permit. The carnival then had to unload at a spur in the town of Menasha.

A petition from the railroad company requesting that the council grant the carnival a permit was submitted, the petition pointing out that it was unsafe and inconvenient to load at the spur because of the heavy traffic on the highway nearby and it increased the cost to the railroad company because of added switching operations. The motion to grant the permit carried, 8 to 2.

Committee to Negotiate for City Airport

Supervisors Set Up $1,000 Fund to Pay For Options on Land

Post-Crescent Oshkosh Bureau

Oshkosh—The Winnebago county board yesterday empowered the aviation committee to enter into negotiations with the Oshkosh Airport, Inc., for the purchase of its property by the county.

An appropriation of $1,000 was made available to the committee to obtain the necessary options on the airport and a farm adjacent to the port property.

The proposal was approved unanimously by the board. However, Howard N. Nye, Oshkosh, proposed a motion which was adopted by the board, stating that the present price is excessive.

Earlier in the session, the aviation committee reported that the airport company is willing to sell for $34,000 and that the Greenlaw-Thomson abstract company had set a price of $11,000 on the farm land, bringing the cost of the port to $45,000.

Highway problems will be ready for discussion when the board reconvenes Aug. 13, it was announced at the meeting. The highway committees of Winnebago and Fond du Lac counties will meet Wednesday morning to discuss relocation of Highway 41.

Leaves in August

Burnham will go to Durham about mid-August to prepare the plant details and Suess and the other two men will leave about Sept. 1. The new plant will be known as the southern division of the Menasha Woodenware company, Shepard stated.

The Durham plant is being renovated to accommodate machinery for making corrugated boxes. The Menasha company, which maintains a corrugated box plant in its Menasha factory, has secured a 5-year lease on the building at Durham with an option for renewal.

Side track facilities are being improved and loading doors for both trucks and rail cars are being installed in the plant.

Shepard announced that the machine company has promised to have the equipment at the plant by Sept. 1 and after the installation, which is expected to take about two weeks, operation will begin.

When the plant at Durham is operating at full capacity, it will employ about 50 men, the vice-president stated. It is hoped eventually to put in corrugated machinery to make the corrugated paper right at the plant.

George Hinton, box plant executive, and Shepard have been at Durham during the summer arranging details for the plant and laying out the building floor in preparation for installation of machinery. It is expected that Hinton will accompany Burnham to Durham next month. Shepard will go to Durham to look over the plant again in October.

NEENAH MENASHA

HOUSEWIFE KNOWS HOW TO FOOL TROUT—Mrs. Arthur L. Haas, 413 Eleventh street, Neenah, is shown in the above picture with her son, Harold, who is watching with interest as she completes a McGinty trout fly. Mrs. Haas has made thousands of trout flies but has never used one because she doesn't fish. Her ability to make trout flies served her as a vocation before her marriage. Today Mrs. Haas makes trout flies because she likes to. (Post-Crescent Photo.)

Neenah Woman Makes Trout Flies, but She Doesn't Fish

Neenah—A Neenah woman has the unique record of having made thousands of trout flies but not one for her own fishing expeditions because she doesn't fish. She is Mrs. Arthur Haas, 413 Eleventh street, who, since her marriage about 21 years ago, has turned a vocation into an avocation and makes flies now only for friends or for those who order them.

A little thread, some resin, a half-inch of chenille, and some feathers together with a fish hook can be turned into a McGinty fly within two minutes by Mrs. Haas who learned to make flies in Stevens Point when she worked in what is now known as Weber's bait company. Mrs. Haas likes to make flies but she doesn't particularly care to make Royal Coachman because they are the most popular flies and since she has made so many, she gets bored with them. Last winter, during her spare time, Mrs. Haas made three gross for a Menasha resident.

Neatness Counts
The most important part in the making of a fly, Mrs. Haas said, is its neatness and its resemblance to natural flies in which trout are interested.

The material for making trout flies is not expensive but the process takes patience, quickness, dexterity and interest or the finished product is a failure. Thread, chenille, feather, turkey wings, duck wings, tinsel, silk and other materials are used in making the various trout flies which have names such as Montreal, Dark Coachman, Gray Drake, grasshopper, Deer fly, Blue bottle, and Royal Coachman. Mrs. Haas used to make 16 dozen and more flies per day when it was a vocation but now her family of three boys and a girl keep her busy so that she works only in spare moments during the afternoon or evening.

Roosevelt Not Candidate but Will be Drafted

Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky mentioned the president's name during his speech accepting the permanent chairmanship of the convention.

50-Minute Clamor
And then, when he finally read the message from the White House for which the delegates had been fidgeting, they turned the big stadium into a 50-minute clamorous tumult.

"I and other close friends of the president have long known that he has no wish to be a candidate again," Barkley said.

"We know, too, that in no way whatsoever has he exerted any influence in the selection of delegates or upon the opinions of delegates to this convention.

"Tonight, at the specific request and authorization of the president, I am making this simple fact clear to this convention.

"The president has never had and has not today any desire or purpose to continue in the office of president, to be a candidate for that office, or to be nominated by the convention for that office.

"He wishes in all earnestness and sincerity to make it clear that all of the delegates to this convention are free to vote for any candidate."

They want Roosevelt.
All the pent-up emotions that had been held back through two days of routine and oratory burst forth as Barkley finished. The noise swelled into a rather - shaking tumult.

"We want Roosevelt," the delegates yelled.

"The United States wants Roosevelt."

"Florida wants Roosevelt."
"Georgia wants Roosevelt."
"Illinois wants Roosevelt."

"New Jersey wants Roosevelt."
And so they went until it began to look as if the convention's regular procedure might be swept aside and the nomination thrust upon Mr. Roosevelt at once.

"Michigan casts 38 votes for Roosevelt," came the cry, over and over.

But Barkley, who after delivering the long awaited message had been alternately kissing state standards, autographing the cardboard placards and acting as a cheer leader through the big microphones, stepped in and spanked the convention back to order with his gavel.

Agree on Platform
Senator Byrnes of South Carolina, floor leader for the Roosevelt forces, announced that the resolutions committee had finished its squabbles over what the platform should contain and that the document could be adopted at the Wednesday afternoon session.

"Tomorrow night we can meet to finish the job for which you came here - of drafting President Roosevelt," he said, and the delegates began whooping again.

An adjournment motion was whipped through, and the delegates, hoarse and sore from their exuberance, went trooping out into the streets.

At a hotel downtown, Hopkins was talking with Mr. Roosevelt by telephone and refusing to say what he had learned. But he also was issuing a statement of confidence that Mr. Roosevelt would accept. A little later, 14 of the men who have been at the forefront of the third term drive were meeting in the Hopkins hotel suite to talk over the method by which the convention would yield up the nomination.

Floor Fight Unlikely
No word came of their decision. Nor was there any indication that the vice presidential race was settled. Secretary Wallace, Assistant Secretary Louis Johnson, and Supreme Court Justice Douglas were among the men prominently mentioned for the post.

All the thorny spots in the foreign policy section of the platform were said to have been planned away, thus eliminating the likelihood of any floor fight and giving assurance of easy adoption.

The foreign plank was described as satisfactory to those seeking a strong anti-war stand.

Barkley's speech last night termed Wendell Willkie, the Republican presidential nominee, a "political chameleon" because he left Democratic ranks two years ago, and said the Republican platform was "written in mud with the feet of a weasel."

Set for Quick Action
The morning session for today was dispensed with and the meeting was called for 1 p.m. C.S.T. with the wheels set for quick disposal of the platform. That out of the way, the road will be clear for getting through with the nomination.

Nevertheless, the indications were that at least three, perhaps four, names in addition to that of the president would be put before the convention.

Chairman Farley, who was given a vote of thanks and a rising ovation last night, for his long service at the head of the national committee, has said his own name would be put up by Senator Glass of Virginia.

Vice President Garner's managers said their plans to have the Texan put in nomination had been changed on what by the declaration from Barkley.

Though no word came from the headquarters of Senator Wheeler of Montana, Senator Clark of Idaho said he intended to make the nominating speech for his colleague unless Wheeler ordered otherwise.

The Maryland delegation had plans for putting their Senator Tydings in nomination. Tydings was one of those against whom President Roosevelt campaigned in the 1938 primaries.

Annenberg Is Told He Must Go to Prison

Decision on where Annenberg shall serve the term rests with the department of justice.

Kirkland echoed the court's remark that "that ends it."

Since Annenberg had pleaded guilty there was no recourse to appeal from the sentence, which the defense had called "unduly harsh."

In contrast to the packed courtroom during an extended hearing of defense arguments for clemency after the plea of guilty, today's action was taken by Judge Wilkerson alone. He brought the denial order to the clerk's office himself. There was no formal court session.

Next step in the procedure for sending Annenberg, reputedly one of the nation's wealthiest men in the publishing, real estate and formerly in the horse race information business, is for the district court clerk, Hoyt W. King, to issue commitment papers. These will be given to the United States marshal, William H. McDonnell, whose deputies will take Annenberg into custody if he surrenders here and escort him to prison. Annenberg is 63 years old.

Must Pay $8,000,000
The count to which Annenberg pleaded was one in a six-count indictment which charged him with failure to pay $5,348,384 in taxes, penalties and interest on his 1932-38 income. He agreed to pay the government $8,000,000, plus interest, in settlement of all civil tax claims. Only a few days ago he sent a certified check for $800,000 to the internal revenue department as the first payment on the settlement.

Judge Wilkerson in a separate order also denied probation for Joseph E. Hagner of Chicago, an associate of Annenberg who also pleaded guilty on July 1 to one count of aiding and abetting the Annenberg tax evasion.

Hagner was sentenced to five-months imprisonment and given a stay also ending next Monday.

MISSIONARY DISPLAY—Examining some of the altar linens which were made during the last year by members of the Green Bay diocesan branch of the Missionary Association of Catholic Women for American and foreign missions are officers of the branch association and the national president, Mrs. Joseph Goeckel, Milwaukee, extreme right. The exhibit was a feature of the annual convention of the diocesan branch yesterday at Monte Alverno retreat house, and in the background can be seen some of the vestments which were made also by Catholic women of this diocese. The other women are, left to right, Mrs. Earl Thomas, Shawano, who was reelected vice president of the branch; Mrs. O. W. McCarthy, Chilton, reelected president; and Mrs. George Rueckl, Luxemburg, retiring secretary-treasurer. (Post-Crescent Photo.)

What's New at the Library

The author of "The Road to War" has put out a new book, "Why Europe Fights," in which he presents the view that the rise of German totalitarianism made it impossible for the democracies of the world to exist in amity and that only the complete defeat of Germany can restore the world's political and social equilibrium. He admits, however, that certain tendencies and national policies were more definitely retrograde, more immediately responsible for the new war than others.

Intended not only for the classroom listeners to whom Clyde Bedell spoke in giving a lecture course at Northwestern university school of commerce, but for practical, long-working advertising men and women, is "How to Write Advertising That Sells." It discusses the magic of words, methods of approach to copy and a check-up on results, and compares copy to show how appeal of various types is used in writing ads.

"How to Become an American Citizen" by C. Myers Berdine contains questions and answers on general and national matters that an American should know, the various stages in securing citizenship papers, who can or cannot become citizens, and similar data.

Three volumes of "The Days We Celebrate" edited by Robert Haven Schuchter give the history and background of special holidays such as Christmas, St. Valentine's day, St. Patrick's day, Easter, Mother's day, Halloween, Thanksgiving, and New Year's day. These additional volumes aim to complete the previously published 21-volume set of "American Holidays and Plays for Our American Holidays."

Family and personal allowances are discussed and suggestions are made as to when to borrow, when to use charge accounts and the like in "How to Make Your Budget Balance" by E. C. Harwood and Helen Fowle.

Already somewhat out of date because of the speed with which the European situation has changed within the last few weeks is Stephen Leacock's book, "The British Empire," published only this spring. The author presents the vast extent, resources and evolution of the British Empire in panorama, and highlighted is the right of the empire to exist, the contribution it has made to human freedom and peace, and the future of the empire.

A saga of the salvage crews is "Up for Air" by Frank Meier. It outlines the comedies and tragedies in the lives of the men who explore the treacherous floors of the deep for a living. Out of his 33 years of experience as a deep sea diver Meier is able to talk about the ways of the men who daily challenge danger, recalling their virtues and faults, making them live as fellow human beings and inspiring the reader with the high courage and abandon of their lives.

"Advanced Tennis" by Chester Bowers tells how to plan your game from the toss of the first ball to the final placement and discusses the relative values of various grips, footwork and timing and other phases of the sport.

True-to-experience stories and poems for children from 18 months to six years, little realists who like graphic details of familiar things rather than imaginative fairy tales, are gathered together in "Stories to Begin On" by Rhoda W. Bacmeister.

"Oral Readings for Moderns" chosen and edited by Elise West Quate contains portions of "Gone with the Wind," "The Good Earth," "Wuthering Heights" and other well known novels as well as some original pieces.

Damaged Morale Evident at Opening Convention Session

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER

Chicago—Heroic morale work will have to be done in the Democratic party organization if the damage caused by the mishandling of the third-term maneuver is to be overcome.

The damaged morale seemed especially evident in the opening session of the convention. The apathy and dispirit were a subject of wide comment among delegates and in the press section. On the basis of the show thus far, several veteran correspondents are willing to bet on a Roosevelt defeat—men who called the turn in 1932 and in 1936. Here I put in my personal reservation to the effect that it is too early to judge about the campaign. All that I would say now is that this start doesn't look too good. Perhaps it will get going later. It will have to, or there may be bad news ahead.

First off, the giant third-term boom which Mayor Edward Kelly of Chicago tried to set off fizzled out in a weak puff. Mayor Kelly is a local hero and an inveterate third-term booster. In his speech of welcome he built up to an intended draft climax, describing how President Roosevelt did not want to run, but insisting that the convention must put forward again "the kind of man that mankind needs: our beloved president, Franklin D. Roosevelt."

He paused. The great organ in the gallery caught the cue and began to rumble. A man seized the New York standard out of its socket and started a march around the hall. But he marched alone! Not one single person joined in. Four large flags were held by Kelly workers, rolled up ready to be unfurled in the draft-Roosevelt parade. But when the parade didn't come off, the flags were put out of sight again. By the time the solitary marcher carrying the New York standard had returned to his place, the second speaker was under way on the platform. Applause had delayed the proceedings for only a few seconds.

Lucas Speech Also Brought Poor Results

The second speaker, Senator Scott Lucas, Illinois candidate for vice president, took over with another welcoming speech. He threw the name of Roosevelt at the delegates several times with even less result than Mayor Kelly had.

Friends of the administration advanced several explanations for the failure of the Roosevelt demonstration to come off. It was too early in the convention. The delegates had weekend hangovers. They thought the mayor was making just the usual speech of welcome and paid him no heed; although for several days the newspapers had been printing that Mayor Kelly would attempt to start the Roosevelt stampede in the opening session. Whatever the reason, the show didn't come off.

Also remarkable for restraint were the night-session speeches by Chairman Farley and Speaker Ban'head, the keynote. Farley never used Roosevelt's name. At the Philadelphia convention four years ago he mentioned Roosevelt three times and drew a half-hour demonstration for Roosevelt.

Keynote Bankhead here in the Chicago convention mentioned Farley and Hull once. He did not mention Mr. Roosevelt's name at all, omitting in delivery one reference that had been included in his advance manuscript. Four years ago Keynote Bankley mentioned the name of Roosevelt ten times, often Train Workmen For Airplane Plants in U. S.

Skilled Labor to Be Available When Men are Needed

BY DEVON FRANCIS

Associated Press Aviation Editor
Los Angeles — One of the "bottle-necks" in the nation's drive for air re-armament, the training of skilled and semi-skilled workmen for dozens of aircraft factories, is being whipped in advance.

In schools supported by cities and states, and run by private initiative men are being taught the art of running huge machine tools, of shaping and riveting metals, and of assembling the big hydraulic mechanisms which actuate the landing gears of bombing planes.

An aircraft manufacturer told me recently that on a visit to Europe he encountered a German aircraft factory workman with a tool kit which would have done credit to a practical research engineer.

"Every workman has one like this," the manufacturer quoted the German as saying, and the narrator added, "he typified a nation geared to airplane production such as this world has never seen."

The same problem of high industrial output in the aircraft field is facing the United States. Some 70,000 men actually are engaged in the construction of aircraft, military and commercial. In all, about 100,000 persons are employed in our aircraft industry.

It has been estimated that almost 600,000 persons eventually must be employed to reach the production of 50,000 warplanes a year. The bulk of them will be skilled and semi-skilled workmen.

In a spirited effort at cooperation, officials of airplane plants on the west coast, from Seattle to San Diego, of late have been in conference to consider the workman problem. They discovered that the flow of workmen from selected schools are likely to be continuous if production were stepped up gradually.

In Connecticut, New Jersey, Washington and Oregon, city and state-supported schools are helping meet the worker emergency. In the Los Angeles area, center of an output of some 60 per cent of the nation's heavy tonnage and military Fond du Lac—Lefty Russell Gresens, with the aid of some expert fielding, led the Fond du Lac Panthers to a 3 to 1 Wisconsin State league victory over the Appleton Papermakers here before 890 persons Tuesday night.

The Appleton boy allowed the Panthers just five hits and had a shutout in his back pocket until the ninth inning when Tommy Hawk socked a 3 and 2 pitch out of the lot.

Higgins also turned in a good performance, but stumbled a little in the first frame to allow the Panthers to score what proved to be the winning runs. Foth singled and Duex was safe on Malattia's error to open the struggle. With Malawig playing close expecting a bunt, McCarthy drove a double down the third base line scoring two runs.

McCarthy drove in the third run with a single in the fifth after Wang and Duex hit safeties.

Gresens retired the first 12 men in order but in the fifth Celtic opened with a hit. Higgins got the second hit in the sixth.

The Panther pitcher hit Hoeftken with a pitched ball after Dancisk and Chell hit filling the bases in the seventh. Gresens then fanned Malattia and Aronson lined to Duex who stepped on third retiring Dancisk.

Hawk's homer was the only hit after the seventh.

Cavaretta's Hit Brings Cubs Win Over Giants

Johnny Rigney Gives Yankees Six Safeties, White Sox Cop by 5 to 1

By the Associated Press

Phil Cavaretta's single with the bases filled in the seventh inning gave the Chicago Cubs a 2 to 0 victory over the New York Giants in a National League baseball game at Chicago yesterday.

Harry Gumbert held Chicago to four hits, while the Giants got to Vern Olsen for six, but the Chicago hurler was tight in the pinches.

Gumbert walked Bill Herman to start the Cubs' seventh. Augie Galan hunted and both runners were safe on Hank Danning's low throw to second. Hawk Leiber also walked and Cavaretta then broke the tie with his single.

John Rigney allowed only six hits as the Chicago White Sox whipped the New York Yankees for the second straight time, 5 to 1. One of Chicago's 12 hits was Joe Kuhel's fifteenth homer. Rigney got three of the Chicago blows.

The Brooklyn Dodgers folded up in front of the Pittsburgh Pirates 5-3 and increased Cincinnati's first place margin in the National league to 31 games. Brooklyn held a 3-0 lead up until the last half of the sixth when three doubles and a single by Bob Elliott chased Tex Carleton and tied the score. The Pirates fashioned two more runs around a triple by Elliott in the eighth.

Cincinnati's game with Philadelphia was rained out.

In the American league the only first division club that didn't bite the dirt was Boston, whose Red Sox had an idle day.

Indians Lose Series
Cleveland lost its third straight, the series to the weird Washington Senators, who made four errors and still couldn't give the game back to the Indians. The score was 11 to 3. Washington scored seven times in the sixth inning when Joe Dobson and Johnny Allen walked four men and Myer and Sam West each drove in two runs with singles while the bases were loaded.

The Detroit Tigers had a chance to regain the lead, but kicked it away as they have so many other times by bowing to the Philadelphia Athletics 3-1.

Fred Hutchinson, the $75,000 pitching wonder of the Tigers made his first start since returning from the minors and rendered a six-hitter, striking out six and walking none. But three of the hits coupled with one of two errors by Pinky Higgins gave the A's two runs in the third Sam Chapman added a homer in the eighth. In addition George Gaster held the Tigers to six hits with better spacing.

The bright spot on the baseball map continued to be St. Louis, where the Cardinals beat the Boston Bees 4-3 for their sixth consecutive victory. Boston made 12 hits off Clyde Shoun to nine the Cards, but the latter sum included two home runs by Enos (Country) Slaughter and the 24th of the season for Johnny Mize.

Trackster Tomboy Becomes a Top-Flight Golfing Gal

As a kid Babe played every sport she ever heard of. The Texas girl hit the headlines in 1930 by setting national records in the baseball and javelin throws and performing well in other events.

AP Feature Service
The harum-scarum tomboyish Babe Didrikson—whose running and jumping turned the 1932 Olympic Games into a one-girl show—has matured into a pleasant, snappily dressed young lady who is just about tops in another sport, golf. After she went professional, following the Olympics, Babe took a fling at exhibitions in various sports, then concentrated on golf. She recently won her first big title.

Babe gained international fame by bettering world javelin and 80-meter hurdle records in the 1932 Olympics at Los Angeles. She was hailed as "the greatest woman athlete" on the basis of these accomplishments.

She turned pro late in 1932 after a mix-up over an advertising testimonial affected her amateur status. There followed a series of exhibitions, some featuring her as a baseball pitcher.

Then golf. Babe was medalist in her first tourney in 1934. Next year she won the Texas crown. Then she was ruled ineligible for amateur golf because of her professionalism in other sports.

She discovered lipstick.

... and beauty parlors. Babe married wrestler George Zaharias in 1938. She kept working on her golf. She'd like to be reinstated as an amateur, thinks she can beat the girls who play in the simon-pure ranks.

Babe won her first major championship at Milwaukee the other day—the women's western open. "No other woman in the world can hit like she does," says a rival, the veteran Mrs. Opal Hill.

Blues Will Play All-Star Squad

6 Millers to Appear In Lineup; Sheehan Is Chief Strategist

Kansas City (U)—The seven other clubs in the American association haven't been able to stop the Kansas City Blues individually this season, so they are combining their talent tonight in the seventh annual all-star game.

Six Minneapolis Millers will be in the starting lineup and big Tom Sheehan, their boss, will stroll up and down the third base line as chief strategist for the league's best.

The Minnesota contingent will be complemented by Outfielder Harry Walker and Pitcher Harry Brechen of Columbus, and Second baseman Johnny Lucadello of Toledo.

Against this array the Blues present a patched up batting order with their star shortstop and league leading batter, Phil Rizzuto, out with a leg injury.

Although Kansas City was drubbed, 19 to 7, a year ago for one of two victories the all-stars have gained in six attempts, a sell-out crowd is predicted. Approximately 16,000 reserved seat tickets have been sold and 4,000 unreserved pasteborders went on sale today.

A majority of the all-stars arrived yesterday. Those from St. Paul and Indianapolis are expected today. The two clubs took advantage of yesterday's open date to play off.

Men Like Women to be Better Than They are

BY DOROTHY DIX

A high school boy is concerned about the kind of wives girls will make by the time he is an eligible bachelor. "I'd like to know what sort of a woman I shall marry," he writes me. "What change will have taken place by tomorrow in girls who today are as generous with their kisses as if their lips were a free-lunch counter? Will a girl who has had affairs with five different fellows in the space of five years be as dependable as my mother, or will a faithful wife have become a museum specimen? I am worried. I don't see how MY girl or any one else's girl can weather the storm that confronts them." Well, son, neither I nor any one else is seer enough even to hazard a prophecy as to what girls are coming to, or what they are going to be like 10 years hence. They have changed so much in the last decade that what they are going to do next is a mystery that is still on the lips of the gods. We have seen them cast into the discard the clothes, manners, morals and traditions by which their sex had been guided for thousands of years, and substitute a new code of their own. We have seen them shed the veils of mystery and most of the raiment in which maiden-hood had enshrouded itself, and boldly flaunt their charms, or lack of them, in the face of an astonished world.

We have seen them making imitation men of themselves and wearing breeches. We have seen them substituting toughness for tenderness, vulgarity for modesty, hard-boiledness for gentleness and sweetness. We have seen girls who used to sing "The lips that touch mine shall never touch mine" guzzling cocktails and reeling drunkenly out of the doors of night clubs. So what next?

It is anybody's guess. Perhaps the girls who wear shorts now in 19 years more will emulate the South Sea Island belles who consider that a shell necklace is all the clothes that any lady needs.

Perhaps marriage will become an outmoded custom and when a husband and wife lose their taste for each other they will simply part, without all the bother of going to Reno and the expense of having to pay a divorce lawyer.

Perhaps children, if such encumbrances still exist, will be turned over to the government to rear by mothers who are too busy running for congress or building a railroad to attend to Johnny's manners and doctor little Mary's cold.

Perhaps by the time you get ready to marry, son, every married woman will be a wage-earner and a man will pick out his wife not for her beautiful eyes or her sweet disposition, but for the kind of job she holds down. Perhaps the thing that will attract Arabella to you will not be your prowess on the football team, but your skill with the needle and the kind of pancakes you can make.

Perhaps there may not even be any homes to cram a wife's style and everybody will live in transient hotels or tourist cabins and get their vitamins and calories out of bottles, instead of pots and pans.

And perhaps men will not demand chastity in the girls they marry, or expect their wives to be faithful, and they will regard any couple who stay together more than a few years as lacking in enterprise and belonging to the horse-and-buggy days. You never can tell.

But, on the other hand, girls, having run wild, may face about and go Puritan. Perhaps after they have had their fling and found that they got nothing but a headache out of it, they will turn back to the old ways of their mothers and grandmothers and see that being good is a woman's best line; that gentleness takes a girl farther than wisecracking; that men want women to be better than they are, not worse; that skirts cover a multitude of the mistakes of nature.

Don't forget, son, that no chameleon can change its colors quicker than a woman can her character, and so when you are ready to pick out a wife, you may find that Arabella is wearing as many petticoats as her grandmother; that she can bake a cherry pie equal to the heroine of the old ballad; that she has cut out the kissing and the petting and all that went with it, and that she will make the honest, faithful, true wife to whom a man can safely entrust his name, his honor and his happiness.

So don't worry about what girls are going to be 10 years hence. They will be all right. And, anyway, when you fall in love you will think they are.

Doubling Is Not Merely a 1-Man Affair

BY ELY CULBERTSON

Most players seem to regard penalty doubles as a sort of one man enterprise, that is, West (for example) doubles one or two spades and East, who is void of spades and therefore feels his partner must be "loaded," joyfully accepts the double and looks forward to paying the rent from the huge penalty he is going to collect. Alas! Under such circumstances East's landlord is usually the sufferer.

The bidding:
West North East South
1 club 1 diamond 1 heart 1 spade
Double Pass Pass Pass

East's leave-in of the double is not the only action that needs explaining. Readers also will wonder why West, holding a five card major suit, chose first to mention his five card minor. The fact is that there are two schools of thought on this problem. The larger school holds that the major suit must be bid first and the minor shown later, if convenient and if the hand is strong enough to risk a high level contract. The minority school insists that if one spade is bid and partner responds with two hearts or two diamonds the original bidder is on the spot. He dare not bid three clubs with this comparatively weak hand, and merely to rebid the spades is to suppress information about the other suit.

There is much to be said for and against both sides of this question, but since it would require a 10,000 word thesis, let us turn to the burning question of the day, the penalty double and East's acceptance thereof. Surely there can be no doubt that the double itself was in order. South had bid West's best suit. West had a singleton, a good defensive factor, in the suit his partner had bid freely. From the viewpoint of West he and his partner might have a complete misfit (he knew nothing about East's strong club support) and if this were so, North-South probably had just as bad a misfit. In short, every condition favored a prompt double on West's part.

But the same cannot be said of East's leave-in. Without even one spade, he would be unable to lead the suit to clear away possible ruffing in the dummy, and it is rare indeed that the doubler himself has such solidity in the trump suit that he can afford to lead it. Moreover, East had excellent support, so far unannounced, for the suit West had bid originally. It was highly probable that there was a game in clubs or no trump available to East-West. If so, they would have to defeat South three tricks in a contract for only one-odd, to compensate for the abandoned game.

As it happened the precise lay of cards would have defeated a three no trump or five club contract (if, against the latter, North opened his singleton club), but this would not have been as humiliating as the actual result, which was that South fulfilled his one spade double contract.

Beauty and You

IT'S GOOD FOR YOU—Gale Storm, of RKO studio, kicks to the right and left in this fashion fifty times a day to slenderize waist, hips and upper thighs.

If, young lady, you have sat and sat, and ridden every place you had to go, you have discovered that your hip and waist measurement have grown two, three or four inches! You should be dismayed, for a heavy midriff definitely robs a figure of beauty.

Being a lazybones, you yearn for a miracle way of streamlining your body, but I regret to inform you that there is no miracle way! To slim to pleasing lines you must work! You must roll, and kick, and bend! Get in the habit of hiking to and from places instead of riding, and take up an active outdoor sport as a hobby this summer. And if you are much overweight, learn to control your appetite!

For Waist Slimming
1. With feet about six inches apart, and body completely relaxed, drop the torso to one's side, bending the knee slightly and letting the hand touch the ankle. Return to position and drop torso to other side. Repeat ten times.
2. Twist the torso vigorously to one side, pushing the shoulder as far back as possible. Swing the torso to the other side, and repeat six times.

3. Drop the body forward limply, knees slightly bent, hands touching the toes. From this position "bob" up and down five or six times. Return to position and repeat.

For Hip Slimming
A hip reducer is this movement: Lie flat on your back, bend knees up, bringing feet close to your buttocks. Keep your shoulders flat on the floor, place fingertips on them and have chin level. On count 1, drop both knees heavily to the right side. On count 2, return to tucked-under position, pulling in abdomen as you bring feet back to position. On count 3, drop both knees heavily to left side. On count 4, return to tucked-under position, pulling in abdomen.

This you may do at least fifty times a day and it is a honey, for it not only rids you of extra hip padding but it strengthens your abdominal muscles, which enables you to stand in better posture with your buttocks tucked under instead of being prominent.

My new hip reducing exercise leaflet is still available if you enclose a self-addressed, stamped (3-cent) envelope with your request.

Case Records of a Psychologist

By Dr. George W. Crane

Psychologist, Northwestern University

A real politician would never be guilty of the poor psychology shown by this clerk. It behooves politicians to send "spotters" around from time to time to check upon their assistants. A good politician may work hard to curry favor with voters, only to have a two-bit clerk alienate them by the hundreds. This is poor politics and poorer psychology.

CASE R-121: Sam B., aged 26, went to the court house to see about his tax bill. His father, who owned the building in which Sam lived, accompanied him.

In the discussion about the matter, Sam's father interposed a few questions. The clerk ignored his inquiries or brushed them aside irritably. Finally he said, "Why the devil are you trying to put in your two bits worth? What's it to you? You ain't payin' the bill!"

Then Sam's father firmly corrected his error and told him the property belonged to him, and that as a taxpayer, he was entitled to respectful treatment by employees in the court house.

DIAGNOSIS: It is not unusual to find subordinate clerks trying to assume all the prestige and authority of the "big shots" under whom they are employed.

A good politician has too much horse sense and applied psychology to make the error of this smart clerk. He knows that he must be polite and conciliatory with all people, for voters are voters. But his two-bit assistants and subordinates don't realize the need for such diplomacy, since they directly depend on votes for their jobs.

Feeling secure in their positions, therefore, they may try to be smart and important. They try to affect all the dignity and authority of their employer, though they lack his brains and practical experience.

Diplomats in Public Places
It isn't always an easy job to deal with people day after day. Their simple queries become monotonous to the clerk who must keep answering them.

But everybody who works with the public must maintain a diplomatic attitude and exercise unusual forbearance, or he shouldn't be holding such a job.

All our state and governmental employees must be made to realize that they are really the employees of the voters. Any ragged, impoverished voter is the employer of every postal employee in the United States postal service, as well as every local political job holder.

It is high time our postal department educated some of its clerks to a better appreciation of this fact. Frequently I have entered post offices to find as many as 5 or 10 people lined up at the stamp window.

The clerk was meanwhile blithely ignoring those customers. He was sitting down taking inventory of stamps or doing some bookkeeping which should have been left till the stamp window was cleared of patrons.

Child Should be Taught Finders Is Not Keepers

BY ANGELO PATRI

Children are to be taught that finders are NOT keepers. More children go wrong because they defend their wrong behavior behind the old proverb than we would like to acknowledge. The road to pilfering and stealing lies in wait for the heedless, grasping, covetous ones.

Teach children, by precept and example, not to covet what they see others have. Teach them that if they do, in their best style, what they know needs doing, they will never lack for what they need. Their own will come to them not by taking, but by the working of the law that says, "All other things shall be added unto you."

"Finding" is a device some children use to cover pilfering, so every find must be thoroughly investigated. All findings must be returned to owners, when the owners can be found. When that is not possible the found article is to be handed to the nearest person who has authority to receive it. In school that is the teacher in charge of the lost and found articles; in the shop, the nearest clerk or floor manager; on the street, the nearest policeman or police station. Under no conditions is a lost article to be retained by the finder until he has made every effort possible, publicly, to find the owner. Holding to that rule will settle any tendency to unlawful findings.

Find the Cause
When children begin to borrow, find or take things they want, we must search for any cause within the child himself within his home and his environment. It usually means that the child finds himself at a disadvantage among his companions. He takes this "adding unto himself" as a means to make himself big enough to fill his place adequately.

In this group we find children who have a bare existence home, sick children, spoiled and selfish ones, failing pupils, and those who want the things they take because they want the power those things signify.

The poverty-stricken child is least among the offenders, the sick ones come next, the failing ones are about as numerous as the sick ones, and the older ones who steal for the sake of the things they take are the most difficult to cure.

Check the Habit Early
I believe few of these children need to be given up as bad bargains. If the home standards are set against such practices they are not likely to prevail. If the first signs of trouble, the finding of too many things that the child likes, is checked promptly, and the child steadily guided and checked in all his dealings with others for a while the idea fades.

I do not put any faith in the notion that poor homes cause crime. My long experience with those who come from such homes is quite to the contrary. Their children are honest and honorable oftener than not. The dull-minded and feeble-minded, who cannot hold their own in the working world, fall into the poorest groups and supply the major part of our criminals. They would offend against the social order if they lived in palaces. The poor are as honest as the well-to-do and so are their children.

Children in every walk of life are inclined to be covetous. Guard against this; check all borrowings, all findings, all evidences of grasping and greed, and keep the slate clean.

Mr. Patri will give personal attention to inquiries from parents and teachers on the care and development of children. Write him in care of this paper, enclosing a three-cent stamped, addressed envelope for reply.

HIGH TIDE

YESTERDAY: Derek gets into a free-for-all aboard the fishing barge and loses his job. But he seems quite pleased with himself.

Chapter 18
New Job
"You lost your temper, that's why," he said. "Wait a minute, Jan. Hold on a minute before you get into a lather! I've given you every penny you asked for since I got the job. All you ever talk about is money, money, money! You're a mercenary wench, that's what!"

Teasing mischief narrowed his one good eye. "Wait a minute, Jan. Hold on a minute before you get into a lather! I've given you every penny you asked for since I got the job. All you ever talk about is money, money, money! You're a mercenary wench, that's what!"

"I never have any money, that's why," she stormed. "Half the time I have to wait for Johnny's rent because he loses it gambling or spends it on clothes and Norma's going home next month and—oh, Derek, can't you understand? It's all I have. Haven't you ever been poor? Don't you know at all the value of money?"

His brows drew together. He looked at the locker where she kept her paintings. He whistled an idea. "Say why don't you sell some of your stuff? People buy that sort of thing. You could raise a little money on it if you exhibited it!"

"And where would I hold this magnificent exhibition?" she inquired sarcastically. "Derek, you are quite mad. Hopelessly mad. No body would pay enough for those pictures to pay for the canvases and if you had any sense you'd know it!"

He dropped down on the cot, bent his arm back and began scratching his bare brown back. "I guess you'll have to get me another job," he said.

"I will," she promised angrily. "And in the meantime you can just help me with the housework for your board and room."

"Meany," he teased. "Shylock. Nagger. What makes you so mean to me Jan? Don't you like me? Of course it makes no difference whether you do or not, I'm going to stay here just the same. I'm your dear lady, for better and for worse! And forget you wanted me once and never just because you're tired of me you intend throwing me away like an old worn-out shoe. But you can't do it, I'll stage a sit-down strike up here on your old roof and tell everybody in the street below about you!"

She laughed helplessly. "Oh, come along downstairs and I'll apply First Aid, you nitwit!"

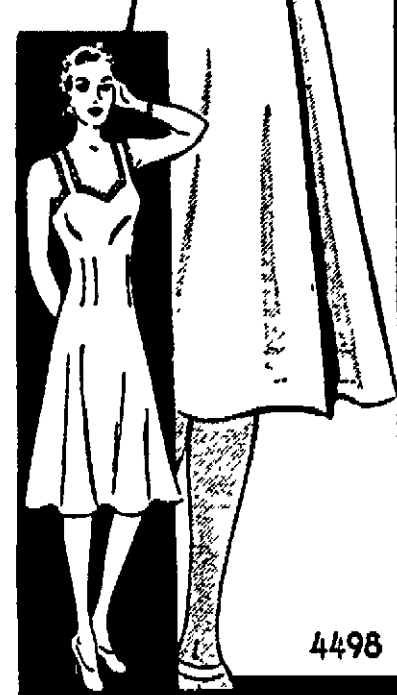

"That's much better," he complained. "What am I going to have for dinner tonight? That brawl made me hungry."

"You'll get nothing," she declared firmly. "Unless you agree beforehand to wash and wipe the dinner dishes."

"Agreed," he echoed, very, very meekly, and followed her down to arnica, iodine, and bandages.

He dallied with the advisability of dyeing his hair, for that copper crest would give him away quicker than anything else about him, but decided against it. He found himself in a curiously ironic situation these days. He had, often, to go without minor things he wanted and needed, yet at any time he could have gone into any bank, established his identity and withdrawn any sum he wanted. But he also knew that the moment he did so his pleasant anonymous life here would end, and he had no wish for it to end, not yet.

Rose appeared delighted that Derek had graduated from "live bait fisherman" to "tramp trundler." Once in tailored silk slacks, once in gay peasant beach costume, she rode with him to the Surf Club and back. He permitted her to share part of his driver's seat and told her in a low voice he considered her: "An unscrupulous, predatory and absolutely selfish moron." To which accusation she replied with light, rippling laughter.

Jan saw them riding together and laughing and decided passionately that Derek was plain traitor. To soothe her vexation she slammed on old straw hat on her head, pulled on baggy slacks, took a fishing pole, told Lance she'd be back in a couple of hours and set off in her boat to sulk. It was the middle of the day, the sun was hot and the fish refused her wriggling bait. The hotter and more tired she became, the more irritated she grew until, when she turned homeward a little after four, her face was threatening as a thunder cloud. She ached to throw Rose's clothes out of the house and Rose with them.

And so, coming off the pier, approaching home, she was brittle with temper and in no mood to receive what awaited her.

A knot of people stood before the big red house, milling about the temporarily halted tram car, craning over one another's shoulders to see the tall man with the red hair who exhorted them to purchase "beautiful, original, marine paintings at unheard-of low prices!"

III--Studied Customs of Middle Ages Before Scott wrote "The Lady of the Lake" and his other famous poems, he was married to Charlotte Carpenter, who proved a helpful wife. In their early life together they lived in a cottage, but later they dwelt in what Scott called his "fairy palace," a building of huge size.

While living in the "fairy palace," Scott turned his work from poems to novels. He wrote "The Heart of Midlothian," "Guy Mannering," "Kenilworth" and "The Talisman."

Richard was warned not to take the medicine.

"The Talisman," a novel of history, had its scene in one of the Crusades of the Middle Ages. Richard Cœur de Lion and Saladin were characters in the book.

Richard and Saladin led opposing armies, but it seems they admired each other a great deal, and they exchanged letters. Tales have been told of friendly meetings between them. Although these stories are interesting, they are not to be taken as true history.

In "The Talisman" Scott imagines a visit by the Saracen leader to the camp of the Crusaders. Richard lay sick with a fever, and Saladin was in the disguise of a Saladin came to cure him. The physician when he offered medicine to the sick man.

Richard saw through the disguise, and took the medicine--though his knights begged him not to risk doing so. Soon afterward he grew well.

Other novels by Scott were built around different periods in history. He had special interest in the Middle Ages, and wrote a great deal about knights and castles and fair ladies.

Scott's novels were not meant to be, exactly true, but they were based on study of olden customs. As we read them, the life of bygone times seems to come back to us.

Scott's novels were the "best sellers" of their day. They were read all over Great Britain, and their fame spread abroad. As a reward for his great skill, he was made a knight, and he is best known today as "Sir Walter Scott."

Says 'Hoppers Will Cause Less Damage This Summer

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
Madison — The grasshopper, the voracious, prolific and thieving insect which costs the farmers of Wisconsin thousands of dollars each year, will do less serious damage to Wisconsin crops this year, according to E. L. Chambers, state entomologist.

Last fall Chambers' helpers made a grasshopper egg survey, and today the division of entomology and plant industry reported that "the grasshopper situation is developing to be a little less serious, as it has been each summer for the last three years."

However, although hatching was delayed by cold weather and wet conditions, resulting in a high mortality also among the young 'hoppers, the central part of the state can anticipate heavy raids from the pests this year, he explained.

In some sections of the territory extending from Winnebago to Taylor county, where from 35 to 50 of the insects now are being counted per square yard, poison bait stations already are being arranged.

Speeds Hatching
"Cutting of alfalfa and clover hay has intensified the problem somewhat by speeding up hatching of over-wintering eggs in these fields upon removing shade, thus increasing soil temperature," Chambers said.

"The farmers are being warned that the critical period for poisoning activities is at hand, if the 'hoppers are to be destroyed before they migrate from the hay stings into other crops and begin clipping the new seedling and second crop alfalfa. Only about a third of the eggs have hatched to date," he added.

Chambers also reported on other crop pests:
"Cut-worms, wire worms and white grubs, aided by adverse weather conditions, have caused severe damage to corn, making it necessary to do much replanting. Blister beetles and rose chafers have been unusually abundant in field crops in the light sand areas."

"Since the blister beetle larvae feed upon grasshopper eggs, the adults of this pest, which seriously injure garden and forage crops, are usually abundant following a few years of serious grasshopper outbreaks. Canker worms have completely stripped shade trees and unsprayed farm orchards in many parts of the state."

Aug. 14 Deadline For Art Entries

August 14 will be the deadline for receiving paintings for the rural art exhibit at the Wisconsin State Fair, Aug. 17-23, Arthur N. Colt, superintendent of the State Fair art department announced this week.

Paintings should be delivered to the Art Gallery, Wisconsin State Fair Park, West Allis, on or before that date and be suitably framed and ready for judging, Colt pointed out.

Rules and regulations for the exhibit are now available in an art catalog which can be secured by writing the superintendent of the art department at State Fair park, he said.

Only Wisconsin artists will be permitted to exhibit and there will be separate classifications for amateurs and professionals. A total of $700 in premiums is being offered.

The entire exhibit will be built around the theme "Wisconsin Rural Life."

Taste Odor of French Weed Will Carry Over in Cow's Milk

The cow that kicked over the lantern that burned Chicago has a small-scale rival for destructiveness in the cow that eats French weed thereby lowering the quality and price of butter, according to J. F. Magnus, county agent.

Magnus said that many of the farms in Outagamie county have French weed, sometimes called Fan-weed, penny-cress, and stinkweed. The taste and smell of the weed will carry over to the milk of the hungry cow which eats it and will show up in butter made at the factory, Magnus stated.

The Frenchweed is described by Henry Lunz, inspector in charge of seed and weed control for the department, as an annual or winter-annual belonging to the mustard family. It was introduced from Europe and is an early maturing plant. The flowers are white, and, when young, the plant is green.

As the weed matures, the flattened seed pods and plant turn yellow.

Farm Wages Higher in State

Crop Service Says Employment on Farms Is Below Last Year

Employment on Wisconsin farms is below a year ago but the farmers are paying somewhat higher wages, according to information received by J. F. Magnus, county agent, from the state crop reporting service.

At the beginning of the month there were 231 persons employed per 100 farms of Wisconsin crop correspondents, a decrease of four persons per 100 farms compared with the total employment a year ago. Of the 231 persons employed 180 were family workers receiving no pay and 51 were hired laborers. A decrease in employment is shown for the number of family workers as well as for the hired laborers.

Monthly wages paid to farm laborers average $31.25 per month with board, according to reports of Wisconsin crop correspondents. An average of $1.55 per day is being paid when board is furnished and $2.10 per day without board. Monthly wages without board average $44.

Reports for July of last year showed that the average monthly wage with board was $30, and $43 per month without board was received. Wages received for work by the day were about the same as shown for July of this year.

Western and southern portions of the state will be better than in the eastern counties where the bees have been slow in building up.

"While the clover crop was good throughout the state, weather conditions have been unfavorable for the bees to work," a state reporter observed. "The main honey flow usually comes between June 20 and July 15, but adverse weather last week shortened this period by a week," it was explained.

The fan-shaped seed pods are often one-half inch across. The plant can be easily seen in grain fields, new meadows or along fence rows where it often grows. It is one of the worst pests in the Red River valley and comes to this state in feed grains.

The plant is easily controlled by cultivation, rotation, or even pulling, according to Lunz. The greatest danger is in allowing the weed to ripen because in this way it is distributed over the farm through hay and manure. It is dangerous both when green and mature. There is less danger when present in hay because cattle will try to avoid it, but several cases have been noted in which damage has occurred when eaten with hay.

The weed is easily controlled and steps should be taken promptly to get rid of it. In several localities the cost of complete control would probably be less than the losses already sustained, Magnus said.

DIM LIGHTS FOR SAFETY

Lawrence Says Parley Farce; Nomination Set

What Washington Boss Says Over Telephone Will Decide Everything

BY DAVID LAWRENCE

Chicago—Exactly as arranged in Washington last week before President Roosevelt's personal representatives left for Chicago, the delegates of the Democratic National convention officially were given to understand by Senator Barkley in a formal fashion Tuesday night that Mr. Roosevelt is not a "candidate" and does not desire renomination.

Just as exactly did Senator Byrnes of South Carolina, another spokesman for the president only a few minutes afterward tell the delegates to come back Wednesday and "finish the business for which we came, namely to draft President Roosevelt for renomination."

Coincidentally a mechanized demonstration was heard whereby the same voice yelling into a floor microphone named state after state delegation as wanting Roosevelt. The artificiality of the whole procedure was transparent. The third termers presumably believe the people will accept all this as spontaneous. Likewise they will presumably believe that the presence here of a committee of five consisting of cabinet members and administration senators to look out for the president's interests and keep the delegates in line was without knowledge or consent of the chief executive.

Third Termers Annoyed
The capacity for mischief of a determined minority in any well-controlled convention is always indeterminate. The third-termers and New Dealers are being annoyed more than anything else by two separate—though often combined—influences.

One group threatens a platform fight against conscription and demands an even weaker plank on foreign policy than has been offered by the administration.

Another group wants to let loose on the third-term issue with a minority report on the platform. The administration forces are yielding on the foreign policy plank. They are ready to declare against anything the isolationists may regard as harmful. So little is the regard here for platform-making and so plain is the intention to pay no attention to the platform during the campaign anyhow that it may be said in advance—the platform will be written to overcome opposition here and will be "interpreted" later by President Roosevelt as he has always done.

As for a debate on the third-term issue, this is a two-edged sword. Some of the New Dealers think the issue ought to be met squarely now as the delegates here are the ones who will have to meet it when they get back home. As one prominent administration man put it: "The third term precedent is just dogma. Why should we be bound in this day and age by what Washington said?"

This sort of argument is what the delegates who are for the third term want to hear and they believe the country isn't much interested in it anyway.

Little About Defense
From the speeches thus far it is difficult to believe the third-termers are in touch with public sentiment. They are still talking as if this were the 1936 campaign when domestic issues loomed as being above all others. Very little is being said about the charges of military unpreparedness and it is obvious, too, that the third-termers are on the defensive with respect to war issues, but these are given secondary, if not negligible attention.

Much is being made in various press reports of the apathy of the delegates and of the fact that Mr. Roosevelt's name was not mentioned in the opening speeches of Speaker Bankhead and Chairman Farley.

This was by prearrangement. The strategy of the third-termers has been to avoid any demonstration until the time came for the big climax... to Senator Barkley's announcements. The address by Mayor Kelly asking that the president be drafted was merely a slip in the plan, it now is explained.

There is no doubt that a major plan has been adopted by the president with reference to this convention, but it isn't very clear to many people here just what the motivating idea of it really is. If the purpose is to make it appear that the president was drafted, then doubtless the Barkley statement was designed to build up the impression of a reluctant and modest chief executive who really is being forced to run against his will.

If, on the other hand, the idea is not to seem to be forcing the hands of the delegates so that they may appear to be coming to their conclusions with a free mind, then the plot is just a bit confused for the fellow-conspirators to absorb.

Gossip Of Revolt

The hotel corridors are buzzing with gossip of incipient revolt. Opportunities for the release of pent-up resentment of various kinds are available, but it will hardly amount to much because this convention is definitely controlled by hand-picked delegates who want a third term and will insist on voting down any attempt to have it otherwise. Even the vice presidency may
